It has come to my attention that this regained popularity in recent weeks. As the author, I'm deeply humbled by the support in the form of reblogs and likes even despite the crass language. I'm not Lakota or from the areas of these tribes. I'm from a Pueblo in New Mexico (shout-out to the Pueblo camp at standing Rock!) And Navajo Nation. I made this post at s tumultuous time in my life when I had accrued so much capital and privilege in the white man's world. Back when these were working links, I was a community organizer that went into a post traumatic stress disorder episode while this post was getting popular 2 years ago when Standing Rock was still at camp. I ask folks to reblog this out of respect to the many people and messages passed that allows for campaigns like these to exist. I'll never know how much was raised but know that y'all were a part of something huge and important. That two years is not a long time and progress is like watching grass grow.

A question for Jumblr: is it permitted to write in a study Torah? Like

One of these things?

I have a Torah I found at Goodwill when I first started seriously considering conversion, and my aunt recently gave me my uncle's Torah (which happens to be the same edition as the one I was using). I want to donate the Goodwill one to my temple for the next Judaism 101 class, to be given to someone who can't necessarily afford materials, and I want to write in the front cover (if it's permitted) where I got it and why, with the additional note that when the student is able to afford a Torah of their own, I would like them to pass this one on to another Jew in need, so that in this way we can have an item with a history and continuity that converts often don't have, and we can all be taught.

But seriously!!! LOOK HOW MUCH HE LOVES HIS FAMILY!

LOOK AT IT

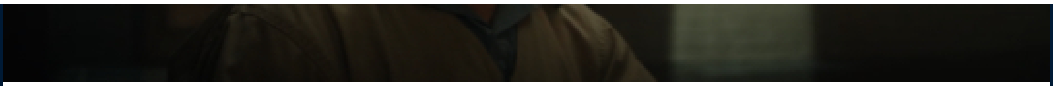
HE LOVES HIS FAMILY SO MUCH AND THEY DON'T EVEN KNOW

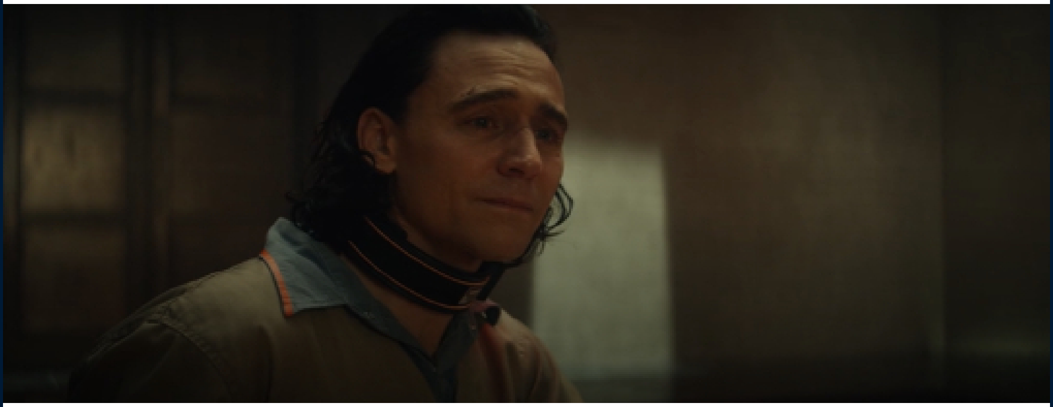
Mourning Frigga

Hearing Odin say that he loves him.

Realizing that he and Thor are still together and talking. And that they watched Odin die together. For one small, incremental moment, he wasn't alone in something awful.



The death of his parents is so painful that he has to look away from the screen. Then quickly looks back up upon hearing Thor talk.

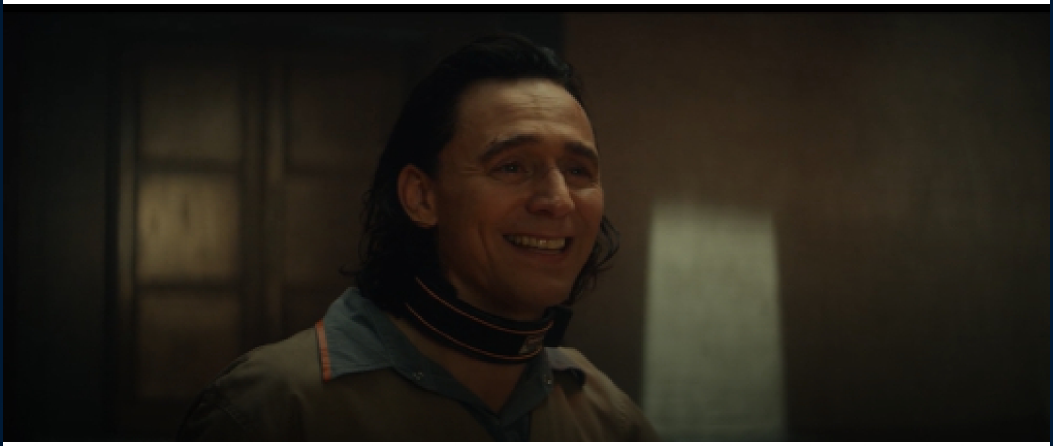


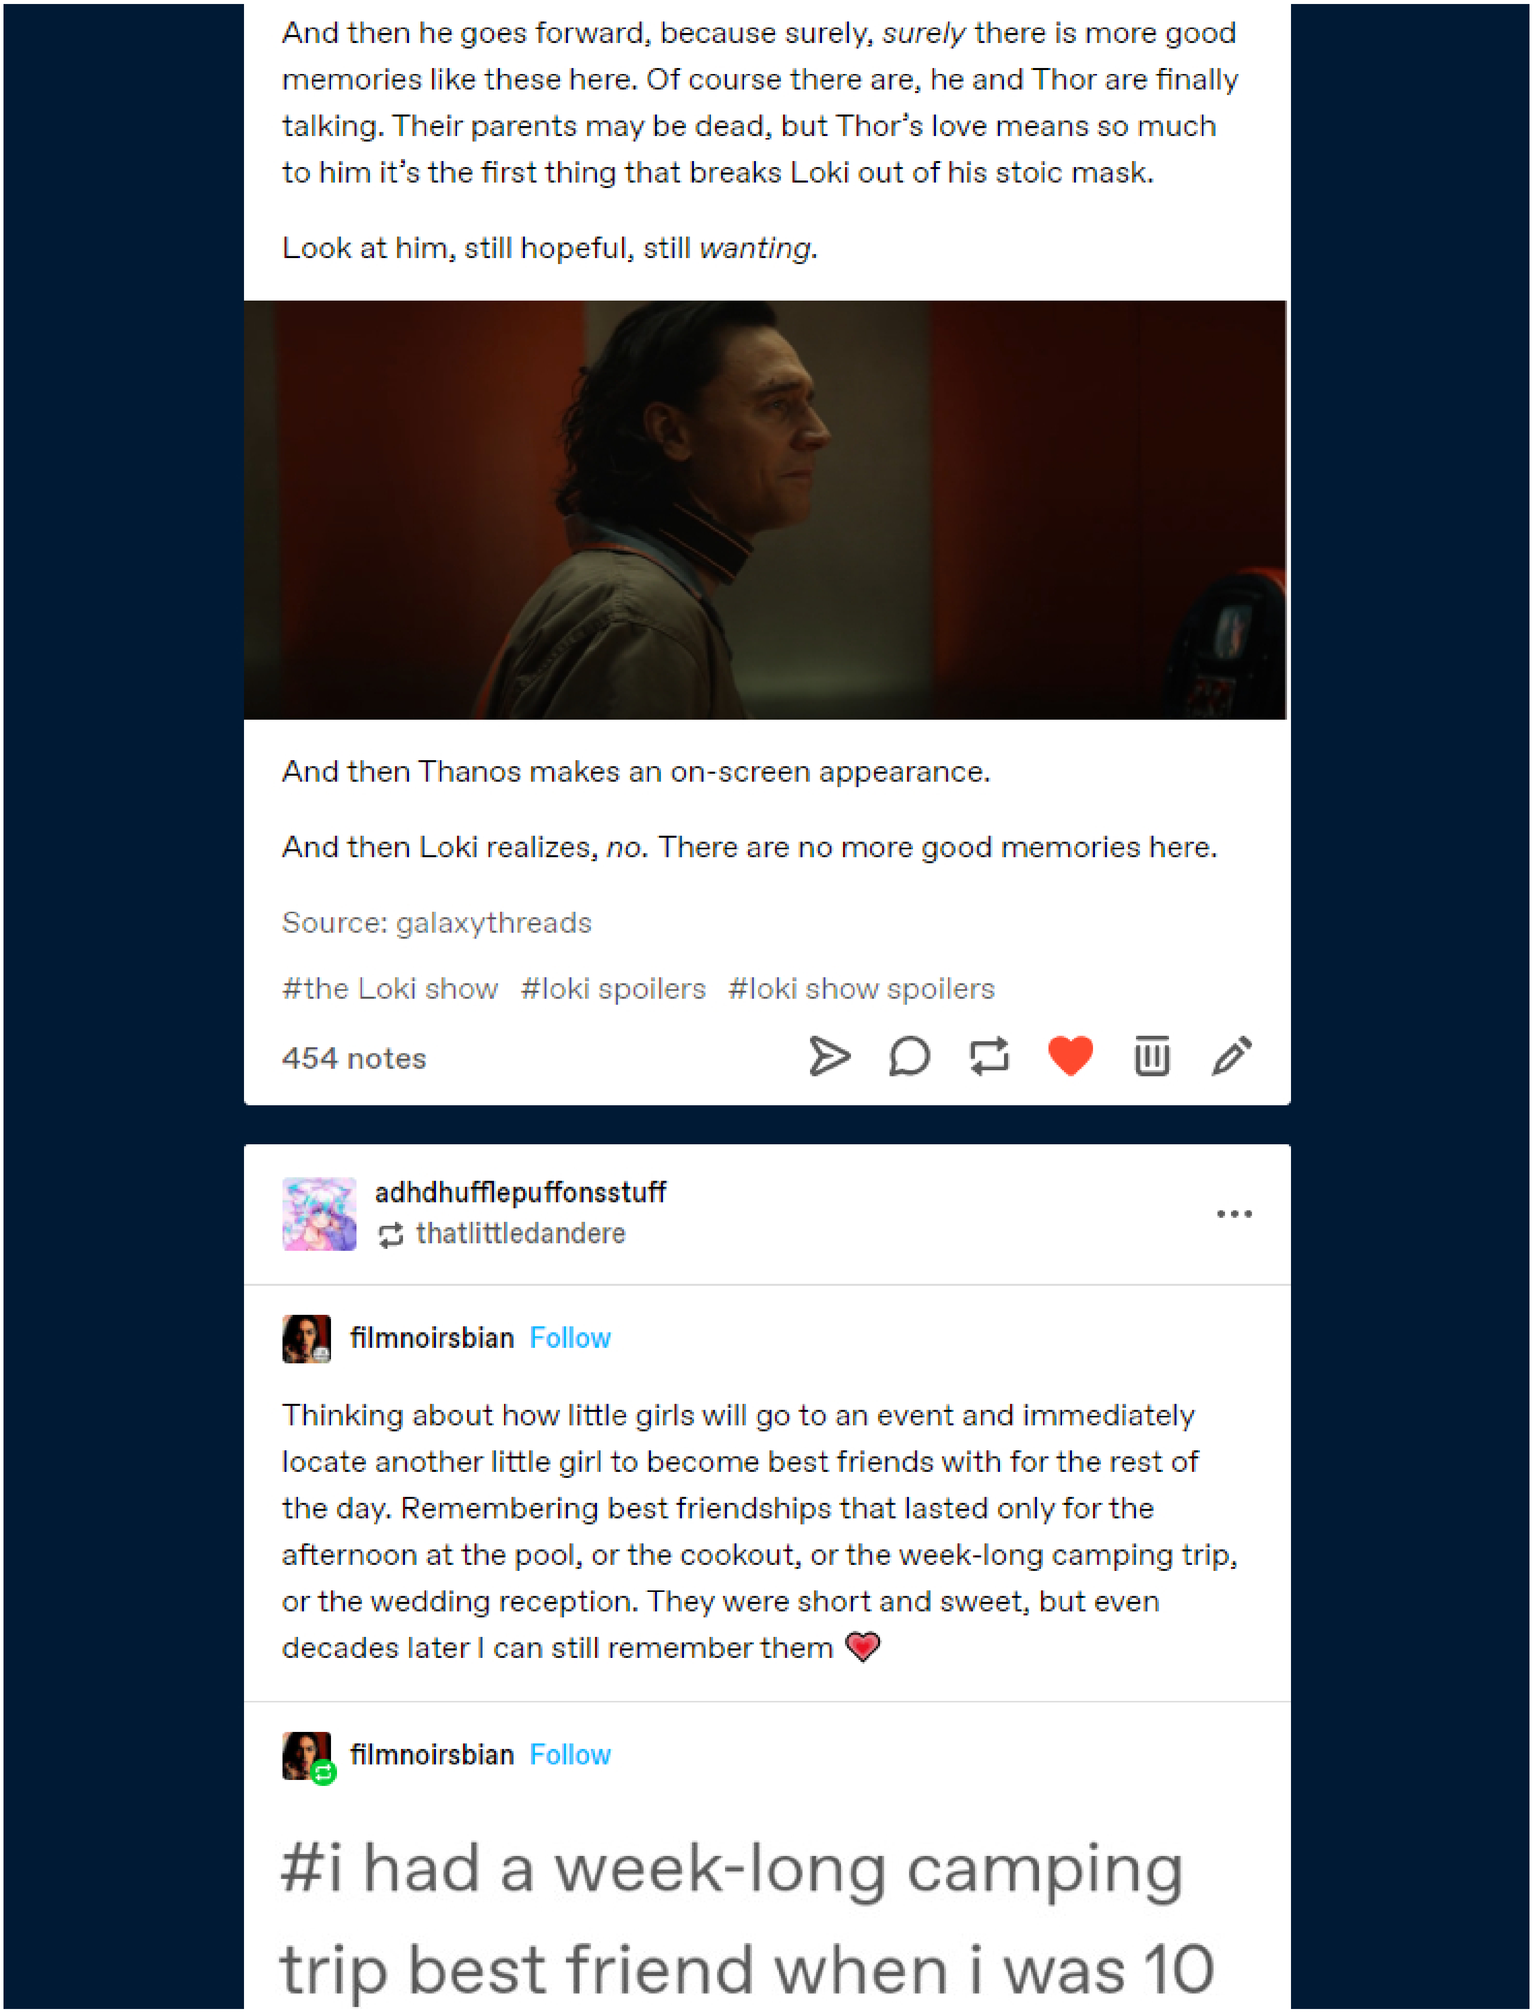
Maybe you're not so bad after all brother,

maybe not

Loki laughs quietly, because Thor gets him. And Loki feels that for the first time in a very long time. Then Thor offers to hug him, and Loki smiles. And laughs. The first, genuine smile and laugh that we've gotten from him since Thor 1 (at this point in the timeline):

And by the Norns, they hugged. You can freakin see it in his face.





And then he goes forward, because surely, surely there is more good memories like these here. Of course there are, he and Thor are finally talking. Their parents may be dead, but Thor's love means so much to him it's the first thing that breaks Loki out of his stoic mask.

Look at him, still hopeful, still wanting.

And then Thanos makes an on-screen appearance.

And then Loki realizes, no. There are no more good memories here.

Anonymous asked:

Wait what's this about a bugs bunny conspiracy?

mumblesplash answered:

Anonymous said

what's the bugs bunny theory topsy

Anonymous said

ok i wanna hear the bugs bunny is anansi the spider theory bc i think i see where you're going but i wanna actually see it bc yes

haha i wasn't expecting people to ask but also yes i will absolutely explain the actual theory is pretty simple, and it turns out only part of it is a 'conspiracy' and not just Actually True. my excitement about this theory mostly stems from the fact that i picked up the necessary background knowledge to put this all together over a span of fifteen years and then connected the dots in roughly two seconds while in the middle of watching a youtube video so in case this isn’t common knowledge, anansi the spider is a sort-of-trickster-god west african folklore character. i was really into stories about him when i was like seven or eight. over the years the specifics of all those fables kinda escaped me a bit, with a few exceptions, like there was one story that explained spiders have segmented bodies because anansi got clever with some kind of communication system with other guys holding strings tied around him but then everyone pulled at once and it cinched his waist? i still can’t find that one.

fast forward to a few months ago, it was actually while looking for that story that i found osp had made a video about anansi and watched it hoping she’d mention it in there. she didn’t, but she DID mention a trick he pulled with a tar baby that trapped everyone who touched it and i instantly jumped up out of my chair like “wait the TAR BABY HOLY SHIT HE’S BUGS BUNNY”

about three years after id chilled out about anansi i had this looney tunes phase (as in i was obsessed with character trivia, i don’t think i ever watched a single cartoon, yes i’ve been like this forever). during a visit to my grandparents’ house i found these old books that i THOUGHT were about bugs bunny, but the rabbit in those stories was only ever referred to as ‘br’er rabbit’ and none of the other looney tunes guys were there. i read the whole thing anyway, and THAT was where i knew the tar baby story from.

i checked to make sure, turns out br’er rabbit was in fact the americanized incarnation of anansi the spider, one of the most enduring folklore figures brought over from africa, probably in no small part due to his penchant for outwitting and escaping ~~white people~~ villains through resourcefulness and trickery (iirc some br’er rabbit stories were actually instructional to a certain extent)

so the anansi → br’er rabbit thing is just true. that’s not a guess, but i couldn't confirm for sure whether or not bugs bunny is based on br'er rabbit. he certainly shares a lot of traits, and i've seen bugs compared to other tricksters before, but this seems like too much of a coincidence not to be directly connected. i thought something like 'well-known cartoon character bugs bunny is Literally a spider god' would be an easily searchable fun fact or at least one of those things some nerd has written an article on, but i barely found anything?

and like it doesn't necessarily mean anything but i can't help but wonder if that has anything to do with why his name is bugs, like come on

Like, I admire the chutzpah, dude, but it doesn't matter if one species has a totally alien concept of everything. If both parties know what they want, communicate what they want, and agree with each other on it, its fully informed consent on each side and therefore just regular interspecies sex. Sentience is sentience, even if the way it manifests is wildly different.

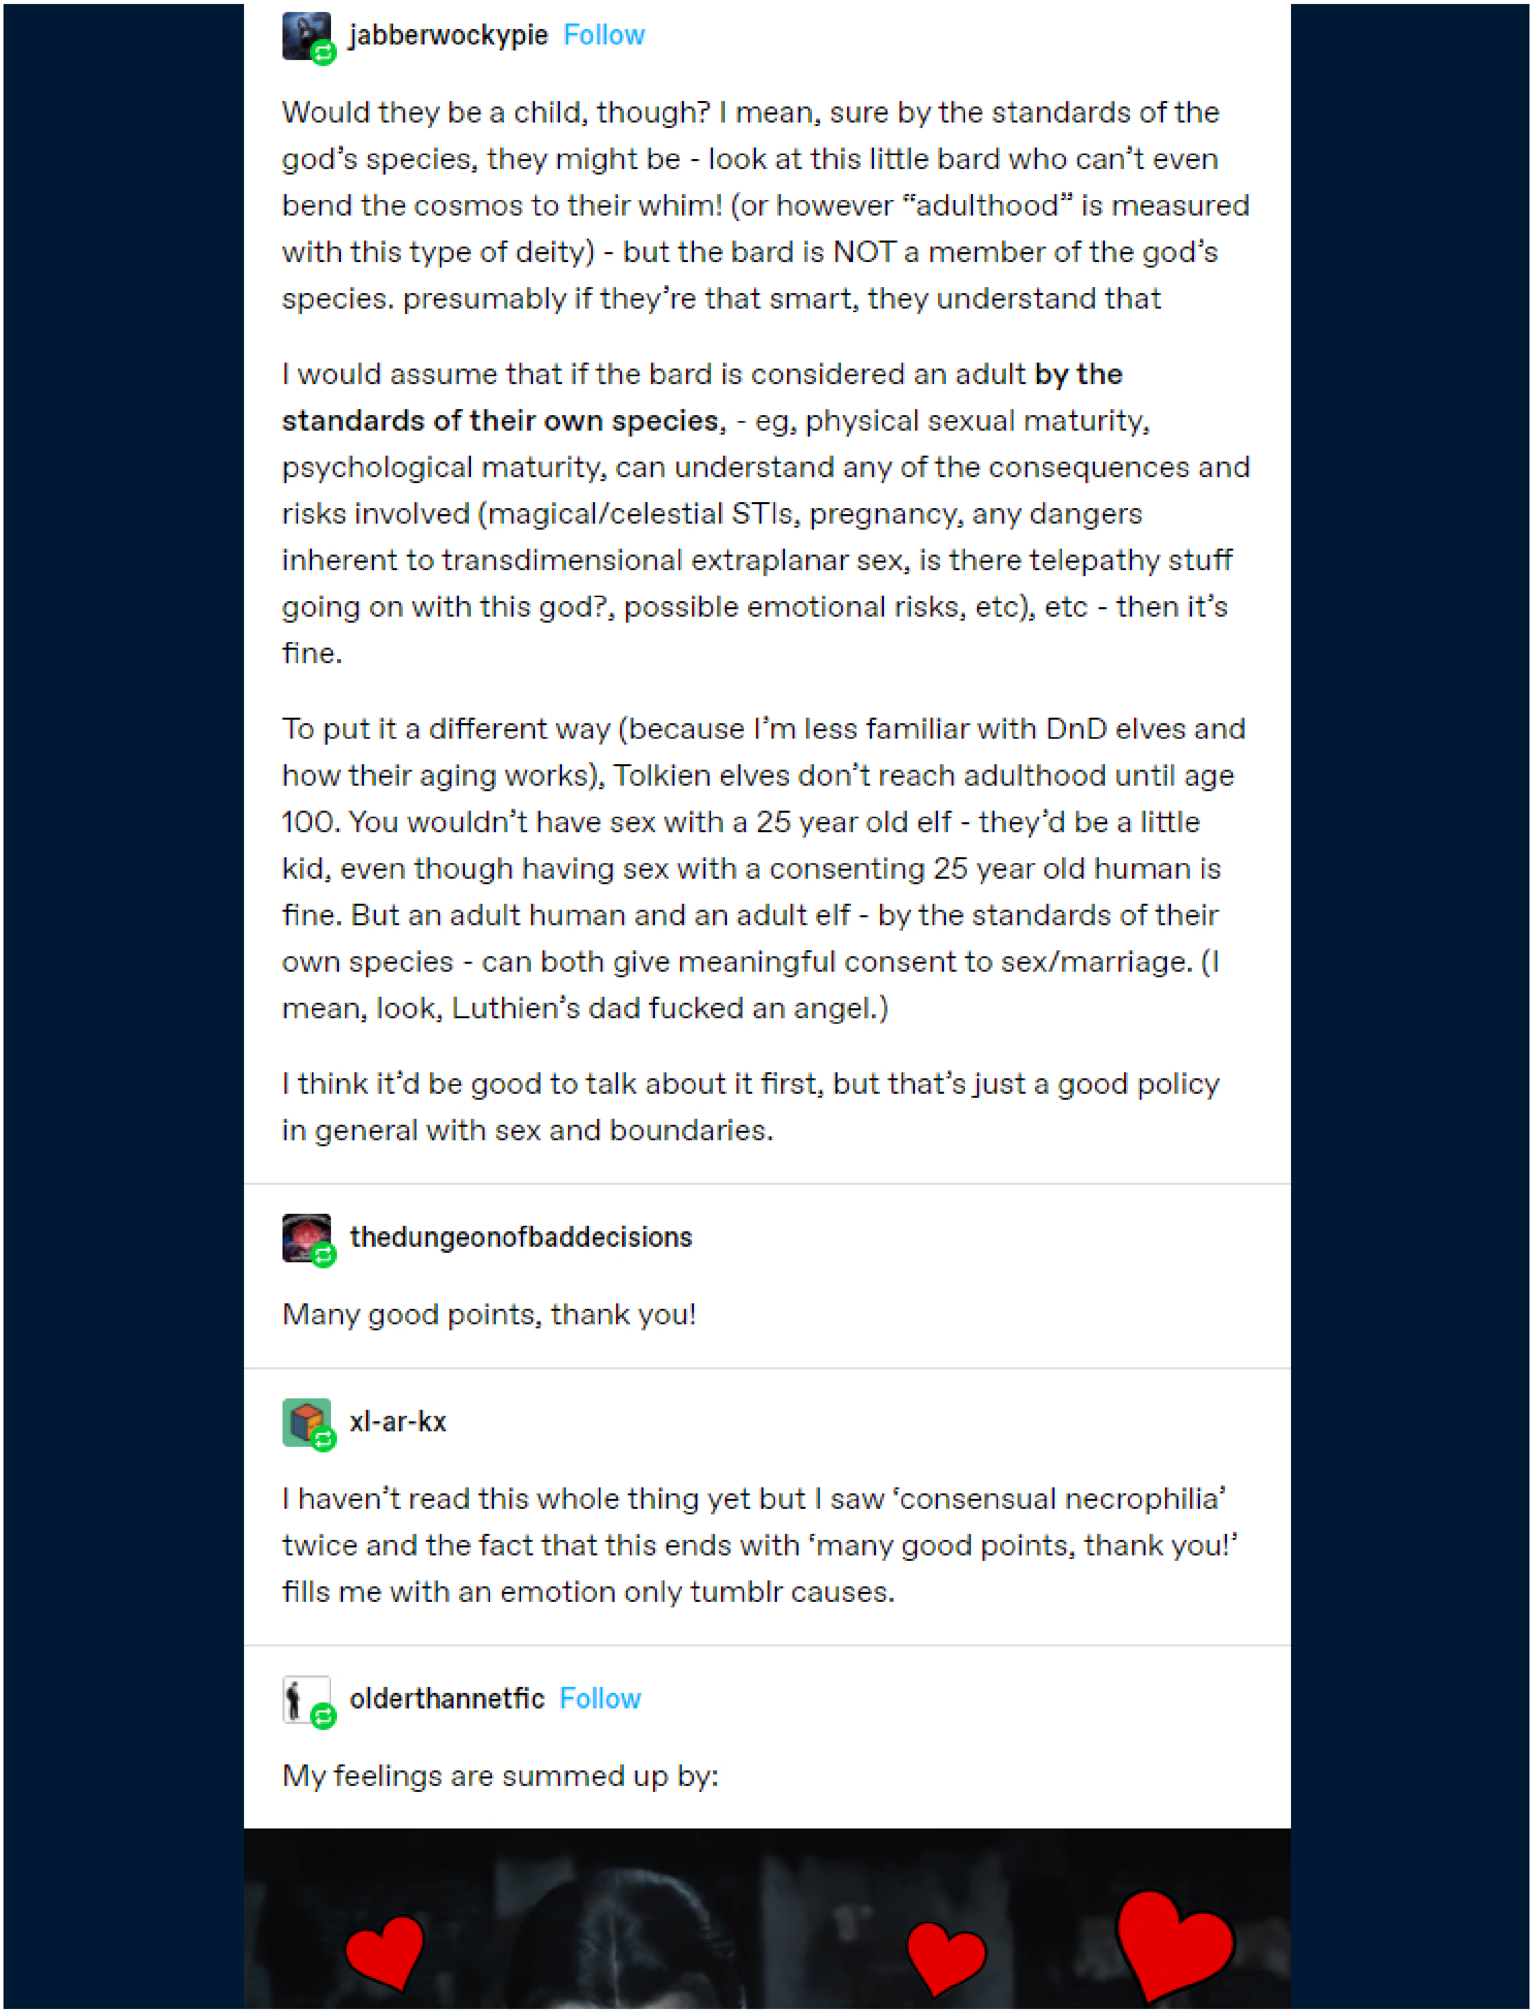
Okay but this does raise the question of hyper-inteligent races with incredibly long lifespans. For instance, if a horny bard was trying to screw a god, from the bard's perspective they're both mature adults. However, by the standards of the god who has lived for millions of years and has a mind the size of a galaxy, the bard may be just a child. So, assuming the god consents, what would the implications of that be?

Now if you excuse me I need to go bleach my brain and stop thinking about this.



jabberwockypie Follow

Would they be a child, though? I mean, sure by the standards of the god's species, they might be - look at this little bard who can't even bend the cosmos to their whim! (or however "adulthood" is measured with this type of deity) - but the bard is NOT a member of the god's species. presumably if they're that smart, they understand that I would assume that if the bard is considered an adult by the standards of their own species, - eg, physical sexual maturity, psychological maturity, can understand any of the consequences and risks involved (magical/celestial STIs, pregnancy, any dangers inherent to transdimensional extraplanar sex, is there telepathy stuff going on with this god?, possible emotional risks, etc), etc - then it's fine.

To put it a different way (because I'm less familiar with DnD elves and how their aging works), Tolkien elves don't reach adulthood until age 100. You wouldn't have sex with a 25 year old elf - they'd be a little kid, even though having sex with a consenting 25 year old human is fine. But an adult human and an adult elf - by the standards of their own species - can both give meaningful consent to sex/marriage. (I mean, look, Luthien's dad fucked an angel.)

I think it'd be good to talk about it first, but that's just a good policy in general with sex and boundaries.

thedungeonofbaddecisions

Many good points, thank you!

It is deeply, deeply beneficial to TERFs if the only characteristic of TERF ideology you will recognize as wrong, harmful, or problematic is "they hate trans women".

TERF ideology is an expansive network of extremely toxic ideas, and the more of them we accept and normalize, the easier it becomes for them to fly under the radar and recruit new TERFs. The closer they get to turning the tide against all trans people, trans women included.

Case in point: In 2014-2015, I fell headlong into radical feminism. I did not know it was called radical feminism at the time, but I also didn't know what was wrong with radical feminism in the first place. I didn't see a problem with it.

I was a year deep into this shit when people I had been following, listening to, and looking up to finally said they didn't think trans women were women. It was only then that I unfollowed those people, specifically; but I continued to follow other TERFs-who-didn't-say-they-were-TERFs. I continued ingesting and spreading their ideas-for years after.

If TERFs "only target trans women" and "only want trans women gone", if that's the one and only problem with their ideology and if that's the only way we'll define them, we will inevitably miss a vast majority of the quiet beliefs that support their much louder hatred of trans women.

As another example: the trans community stood relatively united when TERFs and conservatives targeted our right to use the correct restroom, citing the "dangers" of trans women sharing space with cis women. But when they began targeting Lost Little Girls and Confused Lesbians and trotting detransitioners out to raise a panic about trans men, virtually the only people speaking up about it were other transmascs. Now we see a rash of anti-trans healthcare bills being passed in the US, and they're hurting every single one of us.

When you refuse to call a TERF a TERF just because they didn't specifically say they hate trans women, when you refuse to think critically about a TERF belief just because it's not directly related to trans women, you are actively helping TERFs spread their influence and build credibility.

rickiflannel Follow

what is some TERF ideology we should be on the look out for?

nothorses Follow

This isn't comprehensive, but I'll do my best.

TERFs are, first and foremost, radical feminists. Radical feminism is essentially second-wave feminism without the intersectionality brought in by third-wave feminism. It believes that patriarchy is at fault for the oppression of women, but sees this in a very strict, binary way: women are the oppressed, and men are the oppressors.

TERFs use this to justify their specific brand of transphobia. This idea, among others, is essential in supporting that transphobia.

I'll try to outline some of those ideas, and some of the logical thruoughlines they use:

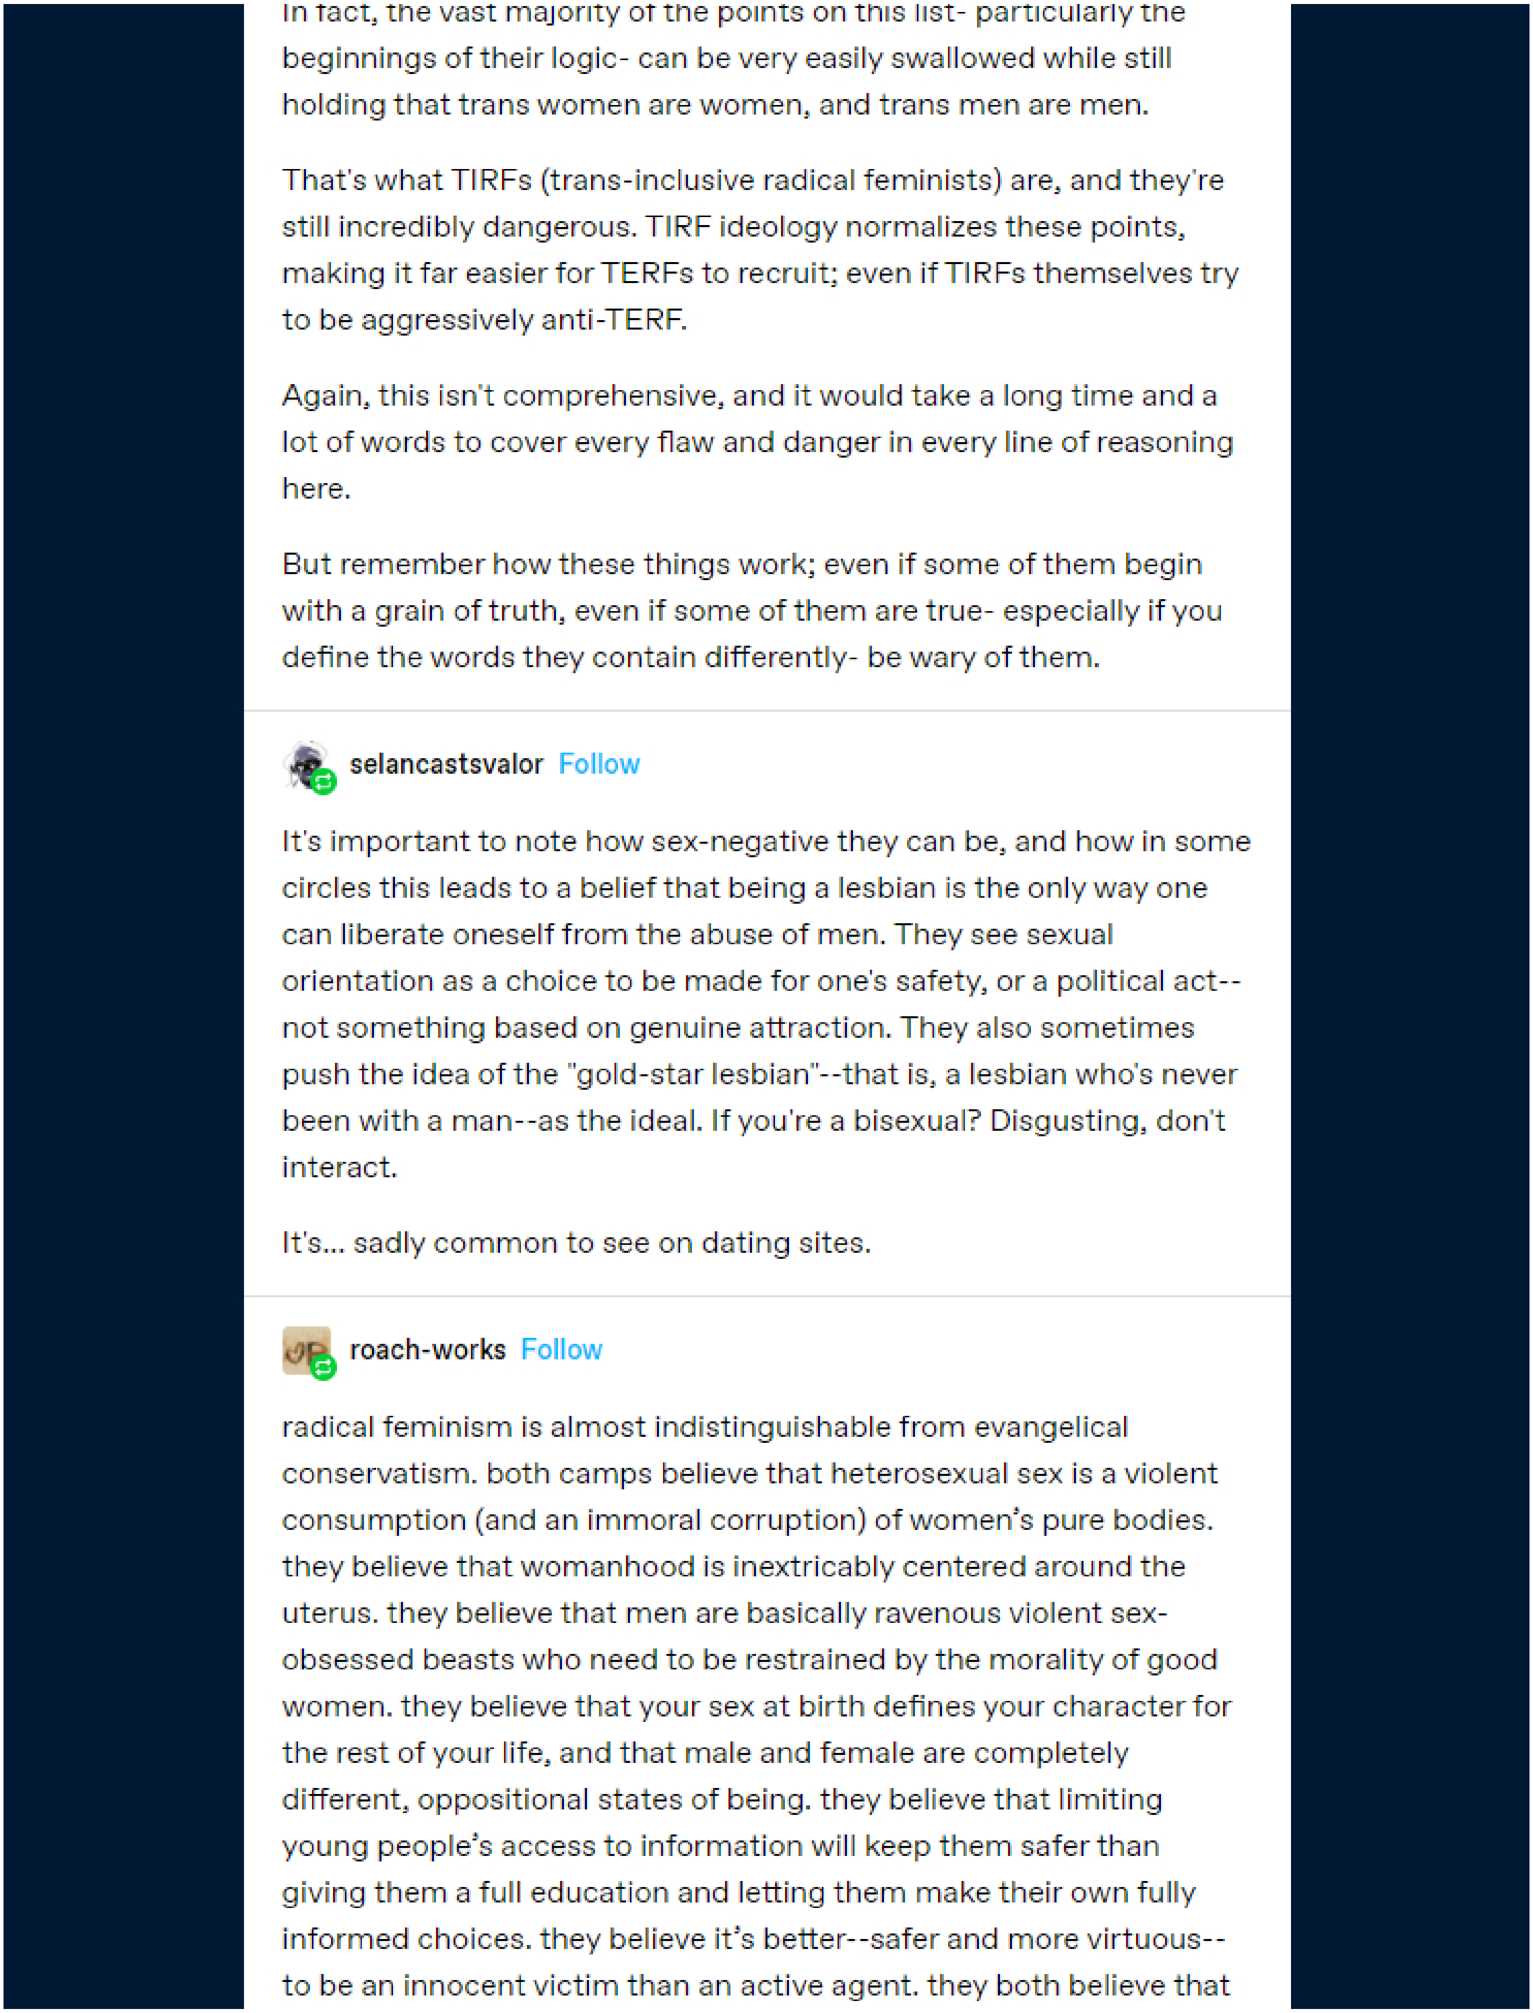
1. Women are uniquely oppressed, and always in danger. Womanhood- or the experience of being a woman- is defined by oppression, misogyny, and Being In Danger.
2. Women are particularly in danger in the presence of, and in relationships with, men. Spaces that exclude men are essential to preserving the safety of women.

3. Socialization: men are raised to support patriarchy, while women are raised to be subjugated by it. Men have no motive to unlearn these lessons, so all men are inherently more corrupted by these lessons than women.
4. Relationships with men are therefore inherently (more likely to be) abusive, and relationships with women are inherently safe(er).
5. Sex, in particular, is more often exploitative than not. Only some kinds of sex are not exploitative. Many kinds of sex that we think are consensual, or that people say are consensual, are either rape or proto-rape.
6. Exchanging money for sex is inherently rape/exploitation/non-consensual in some way.
7. As women who deny men access to them, lesbians are The Most Oppressed and also The Most Endangered. They must be protected at all costs.
8. Because so many women have been raped by men with penises, both men and penises are inherently traumatic to A Lot Of Women.
9. Many lesbians will naturally have an aversion to relationships with trans women because of this. Trans women who argue against this "genital preference" are potential rapists trying to infiltrate lesbian spaces to hurt and take advantage of women.
10. Men will always try to invade "women's spaces" to take advantage of women, endanger them, and strip away their resources both for personal gain/pleasure, and in service of upholding the patriarchy.
11. If we allow men to say they are women, they will invade those spaces and hurt "real" women. Men who say they are women are dangerous, and must be excluded and punished.
12. Men may try to obfuscate labels and terminology to "define women out of existence" or otherwise cause confusion, which they can manipulate to further their infiltration.
13. Women are all miserable with their bodies, cursed with the pressure to reproduce and have sex with men.
14. Women are all miserable with their genders, forced as they are to ensure the overwhelming and constant suffering that is patriarchy.
15. Women will attempt to escape this misery and pressure by "becoming men". This is cowardly, but understandable; a tragic but inevitable result of patriarchy. These women must be saved.
16. Some women who try to escape patriarchy are doing it out of self-interest; they are betraying women by becoming men, and contributing to their oppression. These women must be punished.

17. Bio-essentialism: women are oppressed specifically because of their bodies and ability to reproduce. This is an inherent and defining part of womanhood. Nobody can claim womanhood without this experience, everyone who has had this experience is a woman.
18. Women's bodies are all beautiful and perfect because they are women's bodies. If the womanliness of them is tampered with, they become less valuable. Men's bodies are gross and undesirable symbols of patriarchy.
19. Testosterone makes people violent, aggressive, irrational, and angry. Estrogen makes people calm, kind, and happy.
20. Men can never understand women's bodies as well as other women do.
21. People can be attracted to other people on the basis of "sex" alone. This is inherent, immutable, and unquestionable.
22. Men are sexual animals who inherently and unavoidably find lots of bad things sexually arousing. Because "youth" is attractive, many men find young girls and children attractive, and will try to take advantage of them. Misogynistic control/power over women, hurting women, and even rape are also inherently sexually appealing to men.
23. "Gender" is meaningless; it's founded in misogynistic stereotypes about men and women, and when you remove the stereotypes, there's nothing left at all. Only binary "sex" is real, because that's what patriarchy (and biology) is based on.
24. Manhood is itself a toxic, oppressive, inherently corrupting concept. Anyone who participates in manhood is corrupt and immoral; who would choose to be the oppressor?
25. Masculinity is defined only by hating women, having power, and being aggressive, violent, and controlling (etc.)
26. Patriarchy doesn't just target women, but femininity as a whole, for its association with women.
27. Patriarchy doesn't just reward men, but masculinity, as it rejects femininity. People who reject femininity and embrace masculinity are rewarded by the patriarchy.

Some of these ideas are contradictory, but they lead to the same conclusions. Some of them lead to similar conclusions, many of which take very little further nudging to push into more dogmatic ideas.

This is exactly why we need to understand all of these paths into TERF ideology- and more.



In fact, the vast majority of the points on this list- particularly the beginnings of their logic- can be very easily swallowed while still holding that trans women are women, and trans men are men.

That's what TIRFs (trans-inclusive radical feminists) are, and they're still incredibly dangerous. TIRF ideology normalizes these points, making it far easier for TERFs to recruit; even if TIRFs themselves try to be aggressively anti-TERF.

Again, this isn't comprehensive, and it would take a long time and a lot of words to cover every flaw and danger in every line of reasoning here.

But remember how these things work; even if some of them begin with a grain of truth, even if some of them are true- especially if you define the words they contain differently- be wary of them.

It's important to note how sex-negative they can be, and how in some circles this leads to a belief that being a lesbian is the only way one can liberate oneself from the abuse of men. They see sexual orientation as a choice to be made for one's safety, or a political act--not something based on genuine attraction. They also sometimes push the idea of the "gold-star lesbian"--that is, a lesbian who's never been with a man--as the ideal. If you're a bisexual? Disgusting, don't interact.

It's... sadly common to see on dating sites.

roach-works Follow

radical feminism is almost indistinguishable from evangelical conservatism. both camps believe that heterosexual sex is a violent consumption (and an immoral corruption) of women's pure bodies. they believe that womanhood is inextricably centered around the uterus. they believe that men are basically ravenous violent sex-obsessed beasts who need to be restrained by the morality of good women. they believe that your sex at birth defines your character for the rest of your life, and that male and female are completely different, oppositional states of being. they believe that limiting young people's access to information will keep them safer than giving them a full education and letting them make their own fully informed choices. they believe it's better--safer and more virtuous--to be an innocent victim than an active agent. they both believe that suffering through all of this sanctifies women and proves that they're more noble and virtuous than men. and, of course, the more suffering a woman endures, the more noble it must have made her.

the only difference is that radical feminists express their anger over these terrible beliefs and evangelical conservatives repress it.

and lot of these beliefs are familiar, and comfortable, to a lot of people who aren't even radfems or conservatives. they pervade western thought already. it's a framework of understanding sexism that resonates with a lot of our lived experiences. and going from acceptance of a terrible system to righteous anger at that terrible system can be an important and cathartic stage for victims of that system! but the next step is to reject the validity of that system, which radfems do not.

It's implied but not explicitly stated above that BDSM--all BDSM no matter how well negotiated--counts as "rape" in this type of ideology.

Other highlights: All rape fantasies are inherently sick and dangerous. Pornography is inherently unhealthy and people who say they can separate porn from real life are suspect. "Informed consent" is fake: people are inherently harmed by BDSM/weird fantasies/porn/whatever, and saying yes to those things is just a sign that the person is damaged, not a valid conscious choice.

In a fandom context, the above stuff looks like this:

- AFABs who write m/m instead of focusing on female characters are self-hating women who are betraying their sisters.
- It is the duty of AFABs to write f/f in particular.
- Being into m/m if you aren't a cis man is "fetishization".
- Everyone could just choose to write f/f if they were being politically good. Saying you're "just not into" something is an excuse rather than a valid description of how desire and inspiration work.
- "Because it makes me horny" is never a valid reason for fic.
- F/F is purer and better and softer than any other content.
- All kinky fic is furthering rape culture.
- Kinky f/f is especially heinous and must be stamped out.
- The fact that you have to click on "gross" AO3 works to see them doesn't matter because their very existence is damaging to people.

- If you disagree, it’s because you're a broken, deluded victim engaging in self harm.

Sounds familiar, doesn’t it?

A lot of fandom wank is explicitly and overtly pushing radfem garbage and calling that progressive. Yes, you, trans teenagers of tumblr. No matter how many times you reaffirm that you hate TERFs.

When you say “X is bad except for cope-shipping”…

When you demand that hobbyist women write about female characters…

When you say that people are clearly predators or going to become predators because of their Bad fic content…

You are helping TERFs.

sazandorable Follow

(recapping previous posts to repeat:)

TERF ideology that doesn’t say anything about trans women or even trans people, and that I have seen trans people brandish about, and that is still TERF ideology:

- Idolising women (/in fandom: female characters)
- Women are better, lesbians are better (/in fandom: female characters and f/f)
- This sometimes comes through very innocuous speech like “lesbians are smarter, that’s why they’re attracted to women only” or “this female character is too smart to be straight” (gender-essentialist, sexist, biphobic!)
- All women understand, love and support each other
- Disinterest or dislike for a woman is strictly caused by sexism and misogyny (the girlboss phenomenon). (/in fandom: the idea that the absence of content about a female character or a f/f ship is strictly a sign of sexism/misogyny/lesbophobia)
- Women are pure and soft, infantilising women (/in fandom: you cannot write dark content involving female characters, depicting a female character as anything else than perfect is sexism and misogyny)
- Lesbians are pure and soft, infantilising lesbians (in fandom: you cannot write dark or PWP femslash, depicting a wlw as anything else than perfect is lesbophobia)

- Leading to: you can never be abused or raped by a woman, lesbian relationships are never abusive or unhealthy (normalising abuse, denying support)
- As well as acephobia, with the implication that sex is a matter of morality, purity and choice, and that's it's more moral to depict characters in an non-sexual relationship, as opposed to asexuality and sex-repulsion being just an uncontrollable and morally-neutral orientation and feeling
- Misandry, including casual misandry like "ew men are gross"
- Leading to: All men are abusive and rapists, of course you got raped, you shouldn't date men, what did you expect? (normalising abuse, victim-blaming, retraumatising, denying support)
- As well as the concept that a woman is tainted/damaged by her attraction to men or her romantic/sexual history with men. That sound like anything?
- Biphobia, including casual biphobia like "why would you choose to date a gross guy when you could date ~WOMEN~"
- Leading to: general queerphobia, due to the idea that you can choose who to date/have sex with and there is a moral choice to make; yes, the idea that lesbians are better has queerphobic and sexist undertones
- Demonisation of kink as a weapon of patriarchy, including "kink is abusive and cannot be consensual, kink is caused by trauma and victimhood (if only the victimhood of patriarchy), and kink harms pure and innocent women"
- Demonisation of porn, sex work, and sex workers as all weapons of patriarchy, including "no one would choose to be a sex worker, it's inherently degrading and non-consensual (and so it's completely normal that a sex worker would get assaulted and hurt), sex workers need help so they can stop doing sex work altogether"
- Demonisation of any unpure desires or thoughts: if you find women attractive you are predatory to them, if you are a woman and masochistic you are a traumatised and endoctrinated victim of patriarchy, if you have rape fantasies you are not only a victim but a helping agent of the violence of patriarchy. All dark thoughts and desires are wrong and a sign that something is wrong with you, and it's not healthy to indulge them.
- Due to patriarchy, all women suffer and are miserable from being women. This is not only meant to scare trans women away from embracing their identity and transitioning, but also implies: no one could truly want to be a woman (and trans women do not really exist); if you don't want to be a woman, that's normal and a common womanly experience and a sign that you are a woman like us (and trans men do not really exist)

- All men are horrible, violent people due to their upbringing but also testosterone. This is not only meant to scare trans men away from embracing their identity and transitioning, but also implies: no one could truly want to be a man without being a horrible person (and trans men are traitors to women); if you don't want to be a man, that's normal guilt to have because you are inherently a horrible person (but due to your upbringing you can never be a good person and a pure woman).

And finally, one that does talk about trans people, but pretends to be supportive and not transphobic…

- Attraction to and celebration of trans bodies, especially in ways that end up with PIV sex, are predatory/fetishistic/violent to trans people/heteronormative/inflicting the horrible dreaded patriarchy, by the conduct of penis in vagina. (/in fandom: writing smut involving trans characters is fetishistic and predatory, writing dark content involving trans characters is especially heinous)

Note how this returns to the idea that no penis should go in a vagina, because penises bad and vaginas good and even if it involves trans people it's heteronormative patriarchy, and trans people shouldn't be confident with their bodies and use their bodies for sex. I have specifically seen this one a lot from trans people, even though… it's stealthily rooted in radfem bio-essentialism transphobia and is intended to lead you to TERFism.

(Thank you SO MUCH for this post, OP, it's extremely needed and it's very helpful to get it from someone who had the experience of being taken in.)

Ace is a popular nickname for a person who is asexual. It is a phonetic shortening of "asexual", and has lead to some symbolism regarding the playing card "ace". Some asexuals use the ace of spades or ace of hearts to represent their orientation. The ace of hearts is more commonly used for romantic asexuals hearts is more commonly used for romantic asexuals, whereas an aromantic asexual would generally use the spade.

- ♥ Ace of hearts - romantic asexuals
- ♠ Ace of spades - aromantic asexuals
- ♦ Ace of diamonds - demisexuals and demiromantic aseuxals
- ♣ Ace of clubs - grayasexual and grayromantic asexuals

HOLD UP HOW WAS I NOT AWARE OF THIS was gonna leave my comment in the tags but tbh i'm silent enough about this as it is.

seeing stuff like this is so upsetting because these terms were well known and widespread in the ace community but because of exclusionists many people stopped using terms like this because they felt uncomfortable and unsafe.

i loved these terms when i was in highschool, i loved the feeling of community, but i lost that because i didn't feel comfortable openly and proudly calling myself asexual.

they've hurt so many people and damaged our community badly and i will never forgive them for that. we deserve to use our own terminology and feel safe within our community.

sometimes i notice i haven't seen "grace" (grey-ace) in a while and consequently wonder if i made it up.

slenders1ckn3ss

I remember ppl - even other ace ppl - saying the card suit thing was "cringey" and "straight ppl aren't gonna take us seriously" (sounds familiar?) So i guess the community wound up abandoning it. We were also having severe issues at the time with aces being stereotyped as "childish/immature" for associating things like cake, dragons, and space with asexuality, plus in general as most aces just don't "get" allosexual things in media and irl. We were starting to be viewed as ignorant, virginal, childish, losers, etc. I haven't seen an ace-cake thing in a good while now.

This was the infancy of exclusionary influence on us. I didn't realize it did more damage than just closeting us. Whole symbols and terms have been lost. Community has been lost.

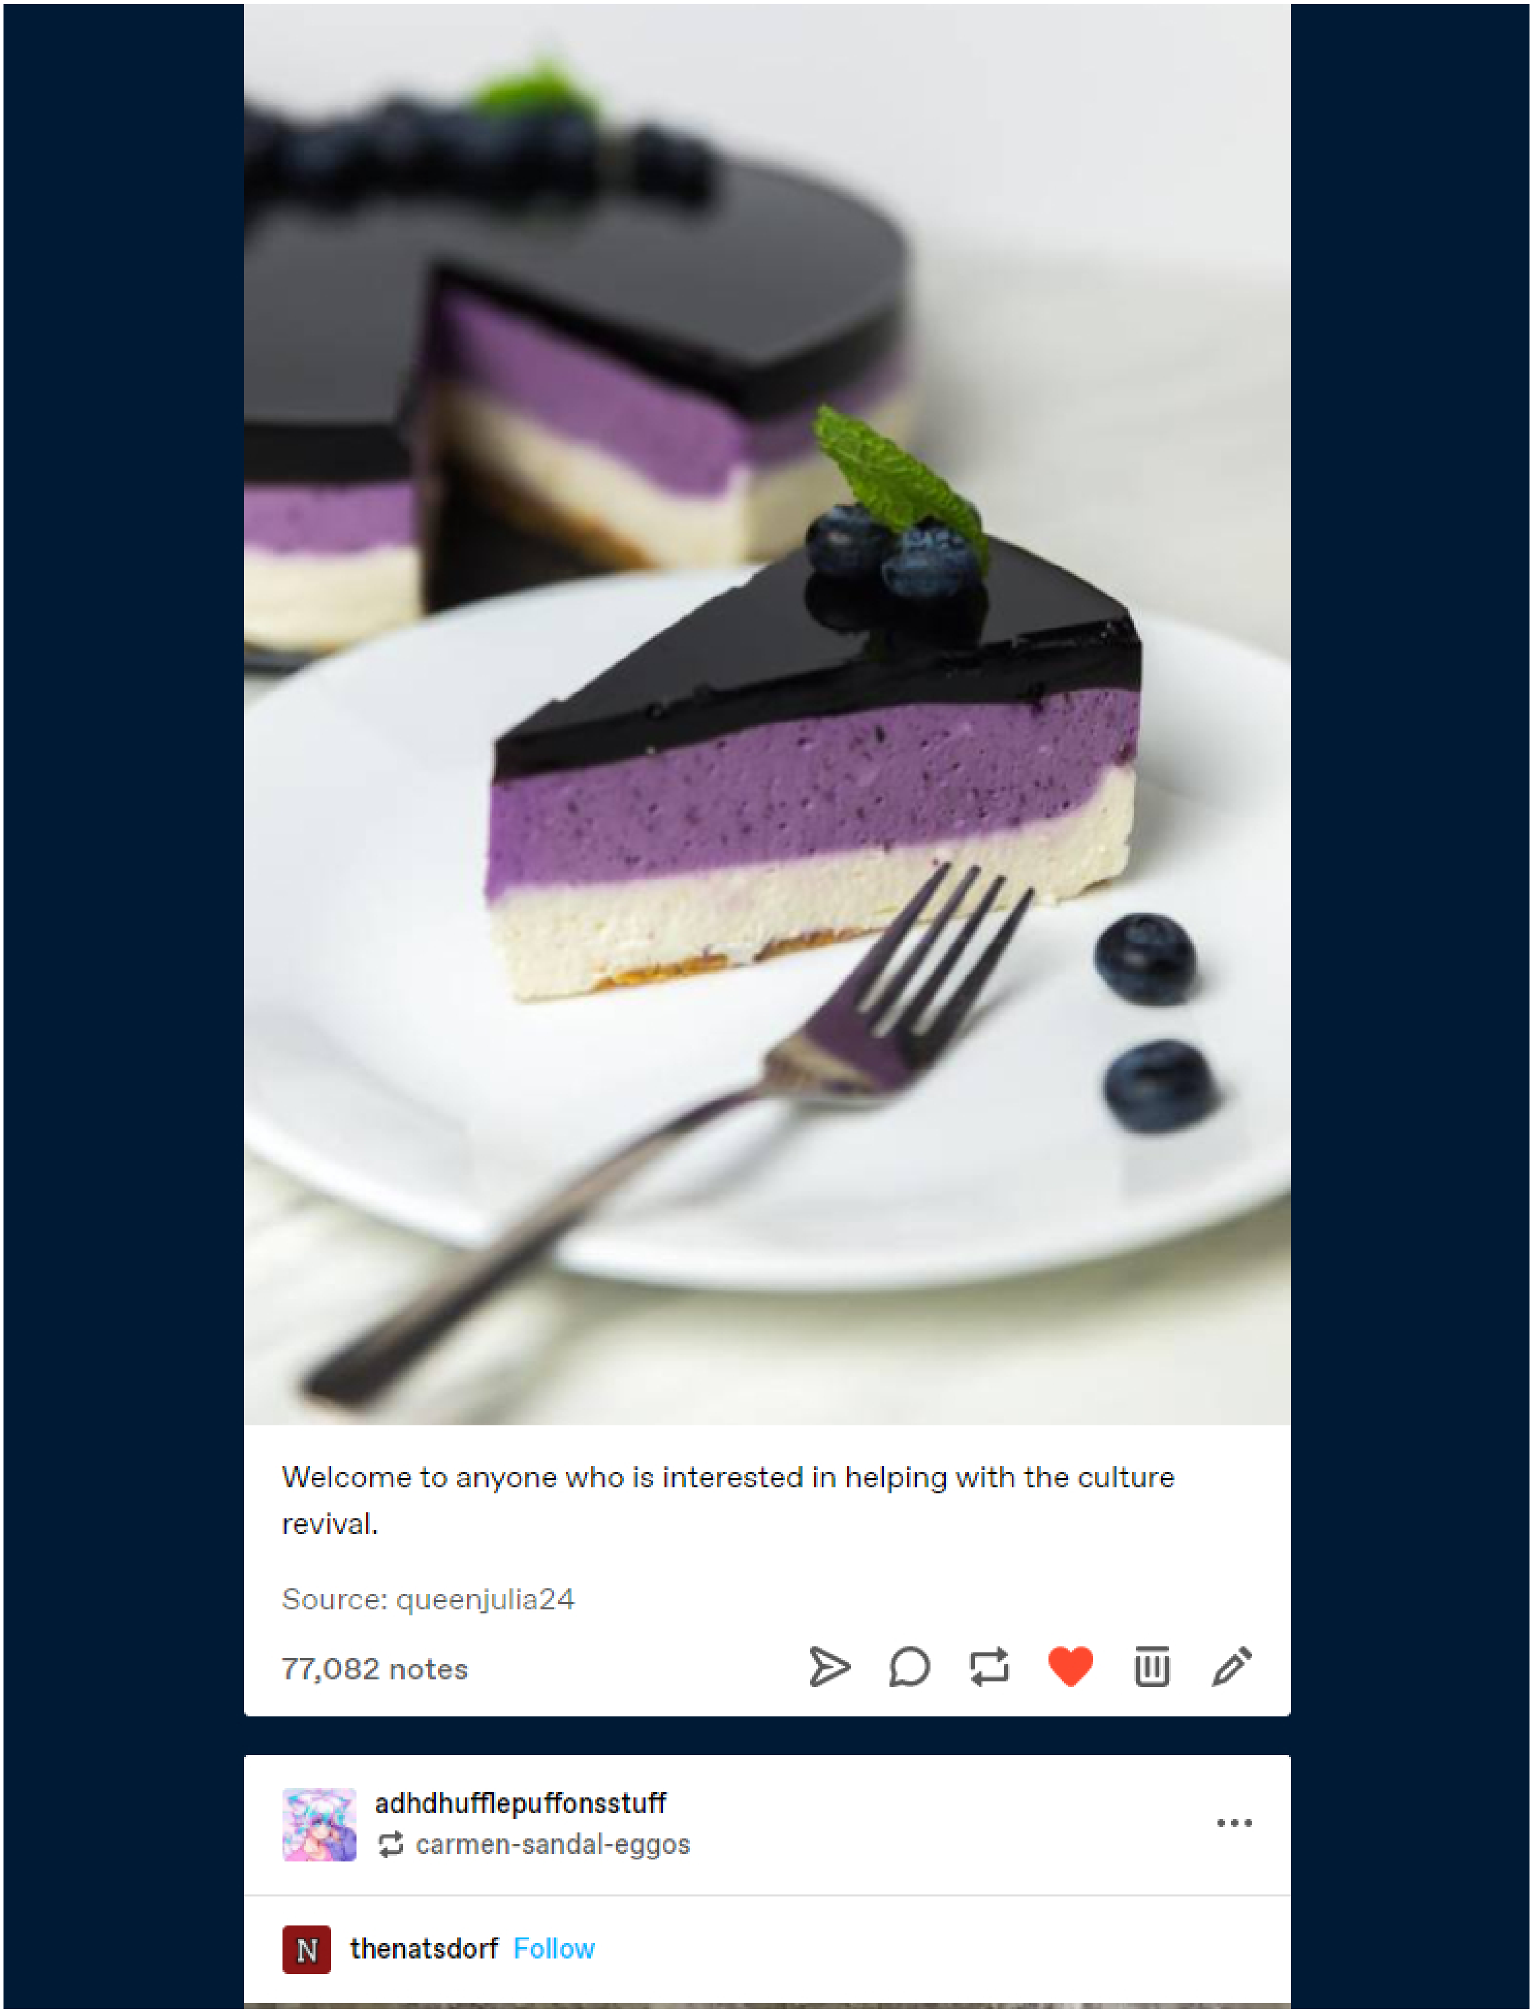
I remember three-four years ago I got myself into the ace community on Insta, and I came across these terms. People in these circles would talk about cake, space, dragons, and the black ring on the middle finger. Then, a year or two later, ace content fizzled out (I thought it was Insta's algorithm figuring out that I knew all this and didn't bring me the old stuff) and young aces had no idea what any of these were - including the black ring. Finding out young aces had no idea what the black ring meant nearly snapped my heart in two - I proudly wore the black ring, I drew characters with it, and it was my quiet way of communicating to others what my sexuality was. I was baffled at the lack of knowledge - and it turns out that exclusionists got their hands into our community and snuffed us out.

Anyways, we need to bring this back. I thought the card suite thing was cool, it taught people the different ways people can experience attraction, I loved making jokes about preferring cake, I loved wearing the black ring and talking about it with my fellow queer people at my highschool QSA club.

kriss-watches-stuff

I'm sorry, people don't know about the cake or ring anymore? I remember being welcomed with spams of cake gifs, photos, and MS Paint drawings. I also distinctly remember that the block solo ring in the midle was meant as reference to the Ace of Spades (black, solo, middle of card). Only thing I didn't know was that other aces could represent a more refined nuance. Let's see if we can get this all rolling again.



Welcome to anyone who is interested in helping with the culture revival.

"In 1984, when Ruth Coker Burks was 25 and a young mother living in Arkansas, she would often visit a hospital to care for a friend with cancer.

During one visit, Ruth noticed the nurses would draw straws, afraid to go into one room, its door sealed by a big red bag. She asked why and the nurses told her the patient had AIDS.

On a repeat visit, and seeing the big red bag on the door, Ruth decided to disregard the warnings and sneaked into the room.

In the bed was a skeletal young man, who told Ruth he wanted to see his mother before he died. She left the room and told the nurses, who said, “Honey, his mother’s not coming. He’s been here six weeks. Nobody’s coming!”

Ruth called his mother anyway, who refused to come visit her son, who she described as a “sinner” and already dead to her, and that she wouldn’t even claim his body when he died.

“I went back in his room and when I walked in, he said, “Oh, momma. I knew you’d come”, and then he lifted his hand. And what was I going to do? So I took his hand. I said, “I’m here, honey. I’m here”, Ruth later recounted.

Ruth pulled a chair to his bedside, talked to him and held his hand until he died 13 hours later.

After finally finding a funeral home that would his body, and paying for the cremation out of her own savings, Ruth buried his ashes on her family’s large plot.

After this first encounter, Ruth cared for other patients. She would take them to appointments, obtain medications, apply for assistance, and even kept supplies of AIDS medications on hand, as some pharmacies would not carry them.

Ruth’s work soon became well known in the city and she received financial assistance from gay bars, “They would twirl up a drag show on Saturday night and here’d come the money. That’s how we’d buy medicine, that’s how we’d pay rent. If it hadn’t been for the drag queens, I don’t know what we would have done”, Ruth said.

Over the next 30 years, Ruth cared for over 1,000 people and buried more than 40 on her family’s plot most of whom were gay men whose families would not claim their ashes.

For this, Ruth has been nicknamed the ‘Cemetery Angel’.”— by Ra-Ey Saley

There is not a huge amount that can be written about episode two, for obvious reasons. Suffice to say that it takes the larger overarching mystery established at the end of episode one – which, in itself, is intriguing – and develops it in ways that suggests larger ramifications for the future of the Marvel Cinematic Universe. The ending of episode two is fairly shocking, and will likely result in some of the most perverse fan fiction the internet has ever seen.

It is, in many ways, the Marvel show that fans have been waiting for.

I want to fall in love,

to have the world stop

when I meet his eyes.

To put all of my trust in someone rested safely in the hands of my lover.

I want to give my all to someone

and receive that in return.

I want to be loved publicly and not in secret.

My love deserves to burn brightly,

not contained or hidden

I want a love to overwhelm me like the blue ocean waves, let the salt wash away the past.

I want to listen to love songs and let the words settle into my heart, knowing that I can understand every spoken word.

I want to dance in the rain like no one is watching.

Let me kiss you in public and declare my love for everyone to see.

But let me love you in private

with cuddles and soft words only for you.

I want to fall in love.

June 10 Solar Eclipse in the Northern Hemisphere!

On June 10, people in parts of the northern hemisphere will have the chance to witness a solar eclipse.

> Watch the full visualization of the eclipse.

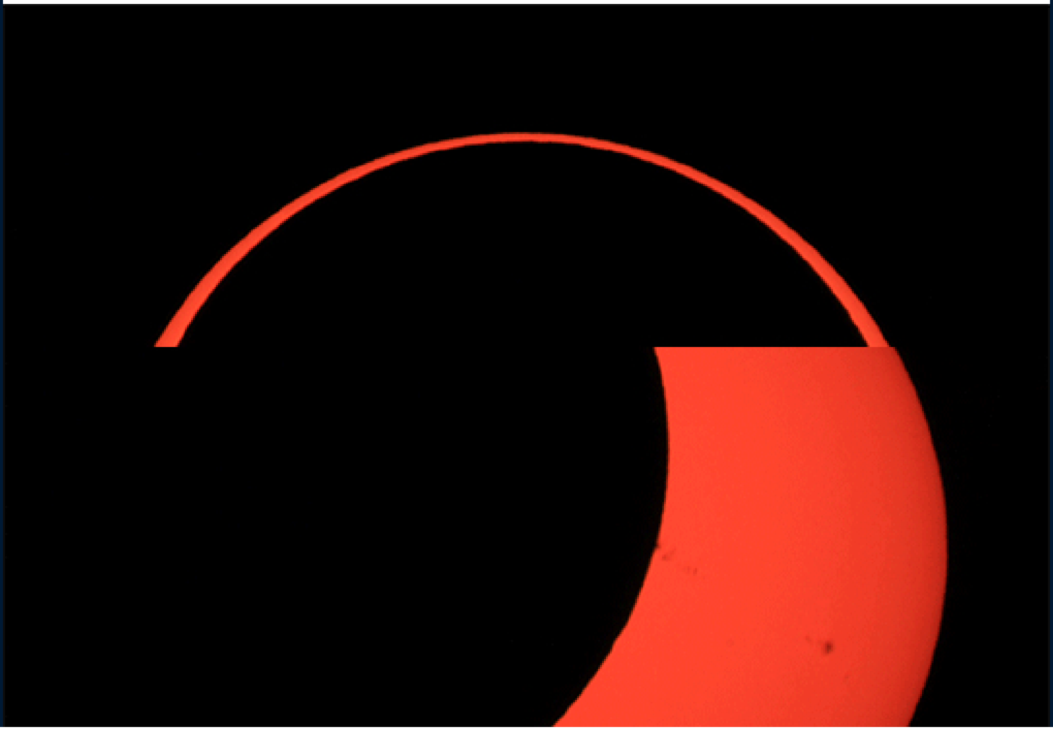
The June 10 eclipse is an annular solar eclipse, meaning that the Sun will never be completely covered by the Moon. The Moon's orbit around the Earth is not a perfect circle, so throughout each month, the Moon's distance from Earth varies. During an annular eclipse, the Moon is far enough away from Earth that the Moon appears smaller than the Sun in the sky. Since the Moon does not block the entire view of the Sun, it will look like a dark disk on top of a larger, bright disk. This creates what looks like a ring of fire around the Moon.

People in the narrow path of annularity — which, for this eclipse, cuts through Canada, Greenland, and northern Russia — will see the ring of fire effect as the Moon passes across the Sun.



Credit: Dale Cruikshank

Outside this path of annularity, many people in the northern hemisphere have a chance to see a partial solar eclipse. The partial eclipse will fall on parts of the eastern United States, as well as northern Alaska. Some locations will only see a very small piece of the Sun covered, while locations closer to the path of annularity can see the Moon cover most of the Sun.

To learn which times the eclipse may be visible in certain areas, you can click anywhere on the map here. (Note that the maximum obscuration and maximum eclipse timing noted on this map may occur before sunrise in many locations.)

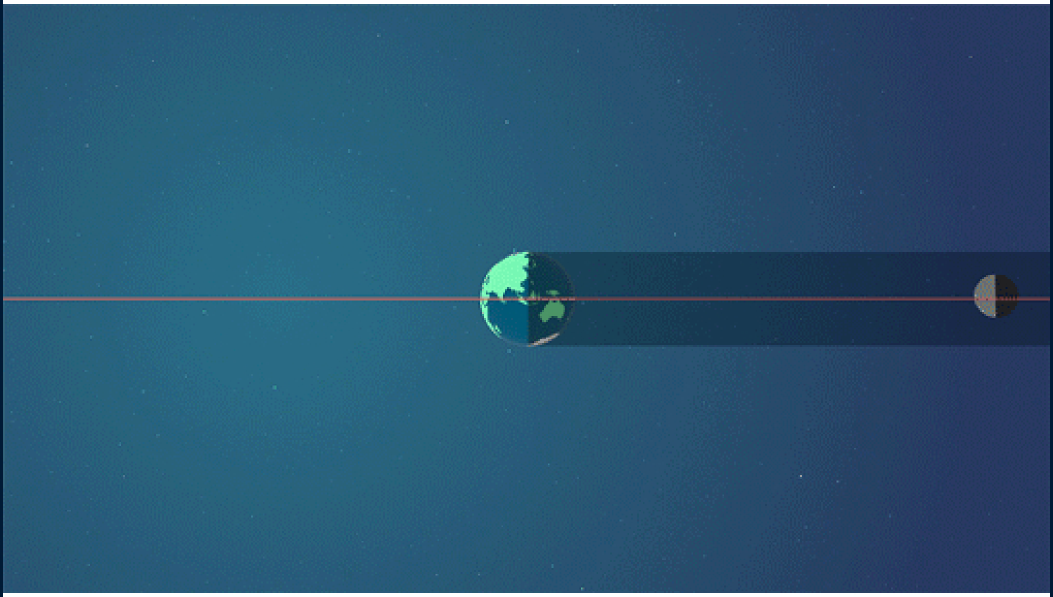
This solar eclipse is a pair with the total lunar eclipse that happened on May 26.

Both solar and lunar eclipses happen when the Sun, Moon, and Earth line up in the same plane — a lunar eclipse happens when Earth is in the middle and casts its shadow on the Moon, and a solar eclipse happens when the Moon is in the middle and casts its shadow on Earth. The Moon's orbit is tilted, so it's usually too high or too low for this alignment to work out.



The May 26 lunar eclipse was a supermoon lunar eclipse, meaning that the full moon happened while the Moon was near its closest point to Earth, making the Moon appear larger in the sky. The solar eclipse happens at the opposite point of the Moon's orbit, during the new moon — and in this case, the new moon happens near the Moon's farthest point from Earth, making the Moon appear smaller and resulting in an annular (rather than total) solar eclipse.

How to watch the eclipse

From anywhere: Watch the eclipse online with us! Weather permitting, we'll be sharing live telescope views of the partial eclipse courtesy of Luc Boulard of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada Sudbury Centre. Tune in starting at 5 a.m. EDT on June 10 at nasa.gov/live.

From the path of the annular or partial eclipse: Be sure to take safety precuations if you plan to watch in person!

It is never safe to look directly at the Sun's rays, even if the Sun is partly or mostly obscured, like during a partial or annular eclipse — doing so can severely harm your eyes. If you're planning to watch the eclipse on June 10, you should use solar viewing glasses or an indirect viewing method at all points during the eclipse if you want to face the Sun. Solar viewing glasses, sometimes called eclipse glasses, are NOT regular sunglasses; regular sunglasses are not safe for viewing the Sun.

If you don't have solar viewing or eclipse glasses, you can use an alternate indirect method like a pinhole projector. Pinhole projectors shouldn't be used to look at the Sun; instead, they're an easy way to project an image of the Sun onto a surface. Read more about how to create a pinhole projector.

This is a sunrise eclipse in the contiguous U.S. At locations in the lower 48 states that can see the partial eclipse, the show starts before sunrise, when the Sun is still below the horizon. That means the best chance to see the eclipse in these locations will be during and shortly after sunrise, when the Sun is very low in the sky. In northern Alaska, the eclipse happens in the very early hours of June 10 when the Sun is low on the horizon.

Bottom line: If you're trying to watch the eclipse in the contiguous U.S., look for a location with a clear view of the horizon to the northeast, and plan to watch starting at sunrise with your solar filter or indirect viewer.

The next two eclipses in the continental U.S. are in 2023 and 2024. The annular solar eclipse of Oct. 14, 2023, will cut from Oregon to Texas, and the total solar eclipse of April 8, 2024, will pass from Texas to Maine. Keep up with the latest on eclipses and eclipse science at nasa.gov/eclipse.

I wanna know too!! Like, firstly, what was the bet on, secondly, did Thor tell him to do exactly, or something like, that or did he tell him to like, just do mischief? If so, what sort of a bet is this where you losing gets you to do something, you know, fun? (he seems like he had fun with it lmao)

Also also, why the money, where did it come from, did he let go of it to deliberately make this a mystery for the Midgardians to solve? Was this what he was told to do by Thor of all people? Maybe Heimdall suggested it like lmao

Answers, want them.

Also more bets and their results

It should not be necessary to point out that, after consecration, the wafer does not actually contain things like gluten and carbohydrate, as it has become the Body (+ Blood, Soul, and Divinity) of Christ. Considering that CNN anchors are pretty public eye in the interest of confidentiality im not gonna reveal what desk this was at, who i used to work under, etc. This was a year before corona hit, so I figure it's been long enough that i can tell this

So I was fully applying for a job I wasn't entirely qualified for. I had tons of field journalism and editorial experience, but that was in media journalism. I wasn't expecting to get a call back, so of course I went and presented my best self. I was expecting this interview to happen in like, a private office. I got up to their floor, shook hands with my interviewer, and he deadass just... stood in the hallway with me while writers and tech people were running by and did it there.

I handed him my CV, he looked at it for all of 2 seconds before he said "this is a nice layout," and folded it into his pocket to never look at again. He doesn't bring up my experience, or my references, skills, education, anything. He just starts firing off riddles at me

I swear to god, he doesn't miss a beat. He just goes from complimenting my CV's look and then says "what's the world's largest desert?"

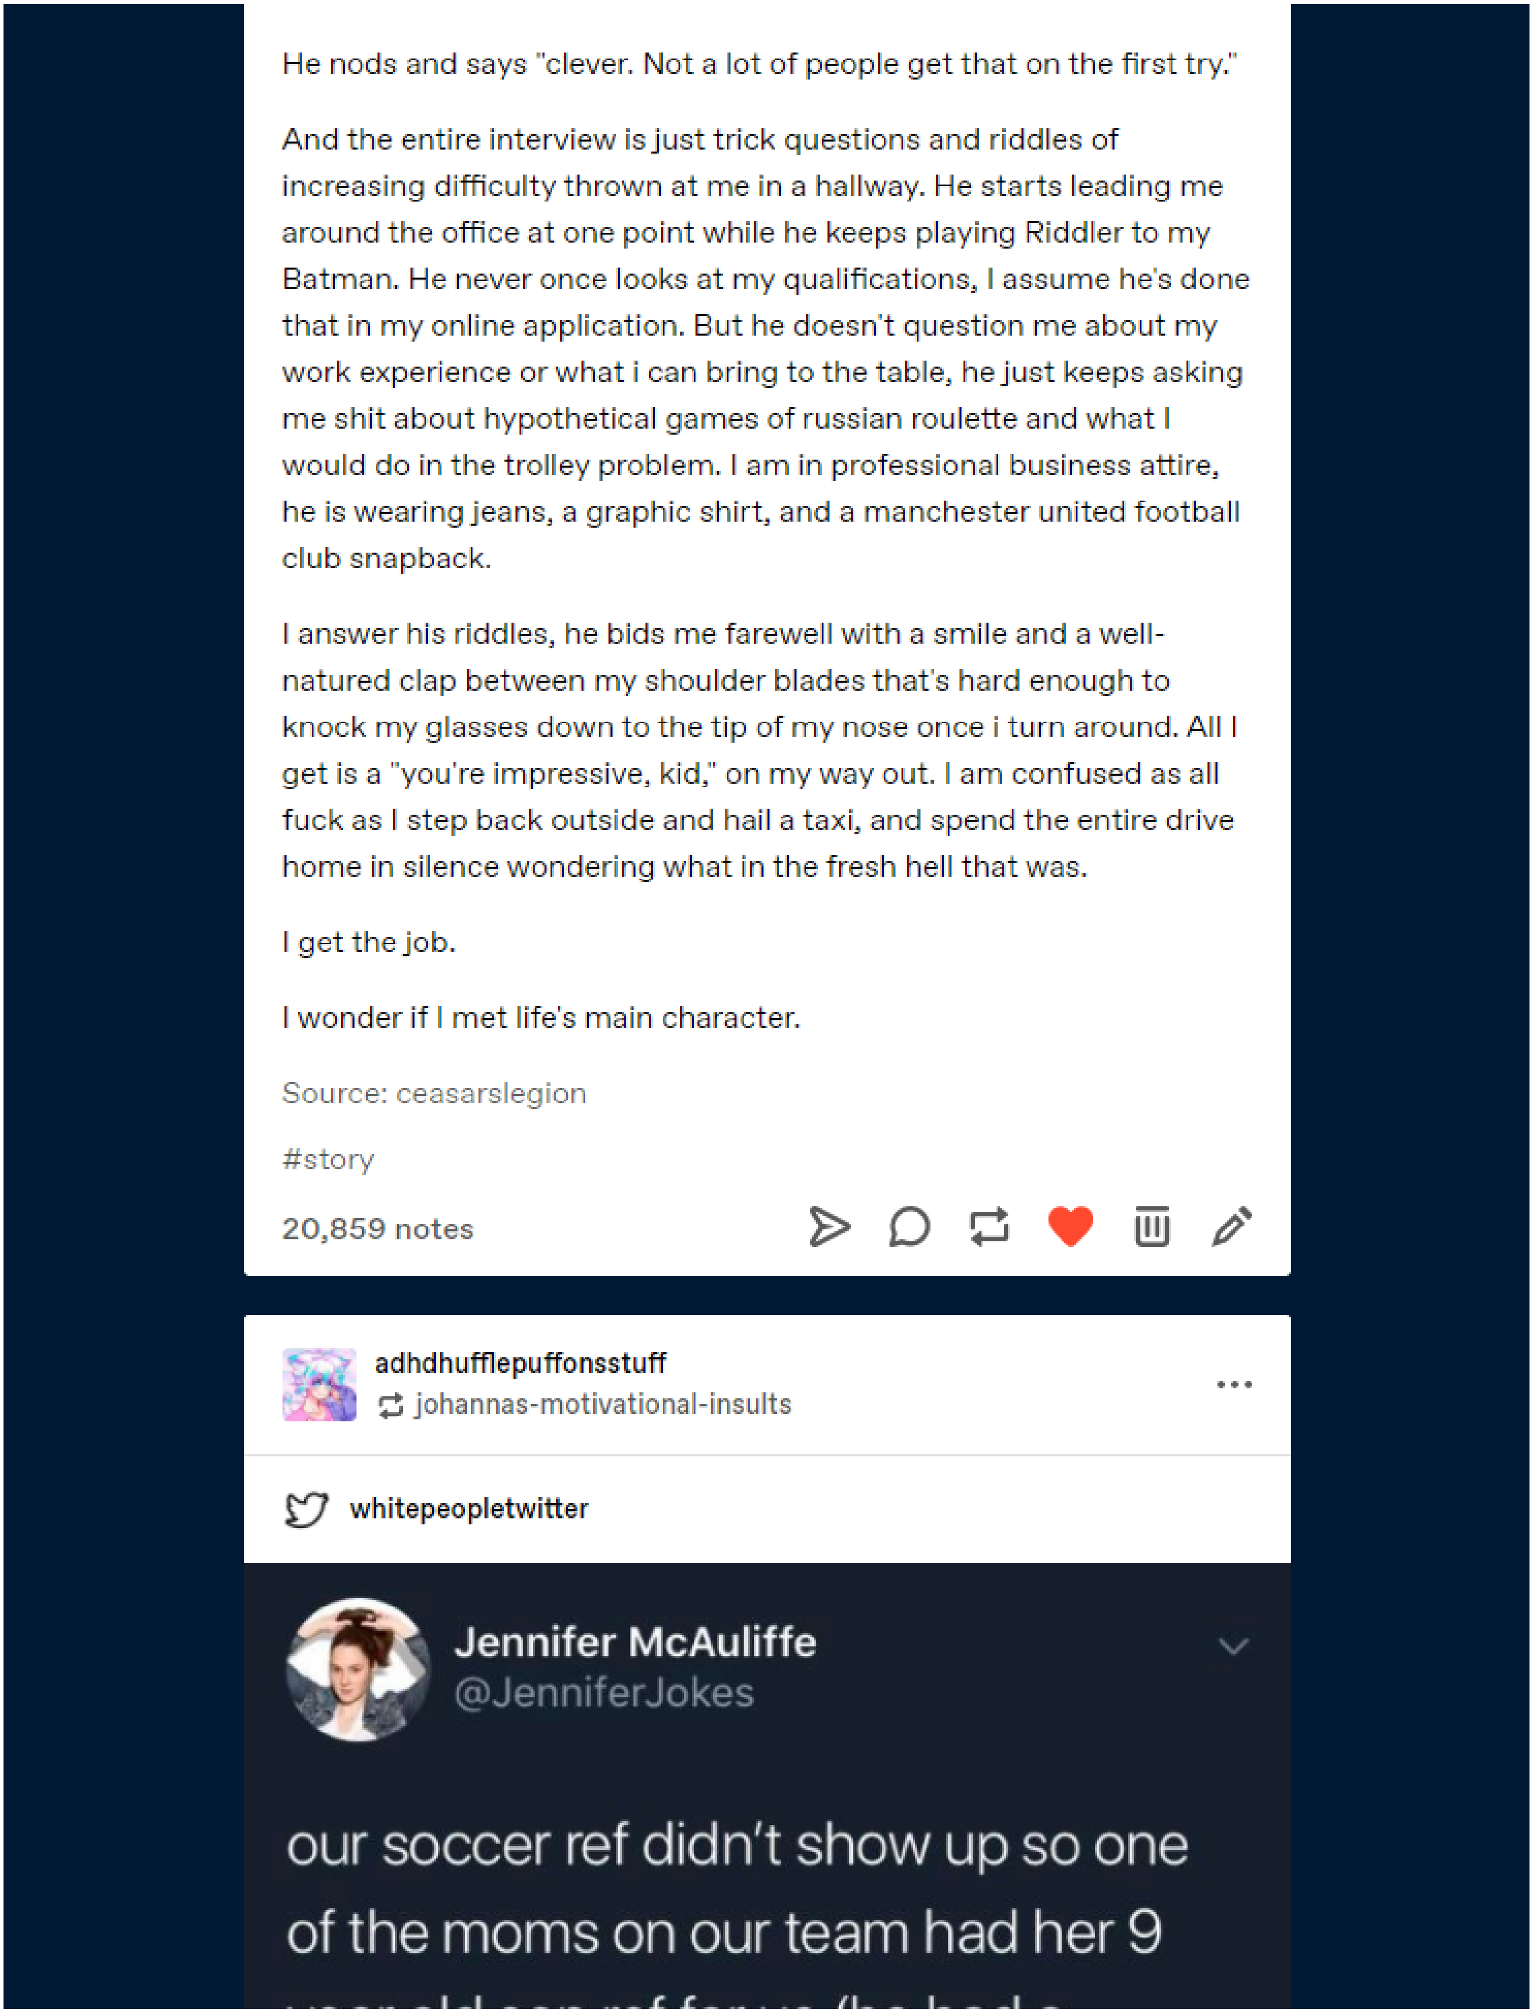
I ask "hot or cold?"

He says "either"

I say "then Antarctica." I have no idea what the fuck is happening, but this might as well happen. My life is already so goddamn weird.

"But there's ice everywhere."

"Doesn't mean the water is accessible."



He nods and says "clever. Not a lot of people get that on the first try."

And the entire interview is just trick questions and riddles of increasing difficulty thrown at me in a hallway. He starts leading me around the office at one point while he keeps playing Riddler to my Batman. He never once looks at my qualifications, I assume he's done that in my online application. But he doesn't question me about my work experience or what i can bring to the table, he just keeps asking me shit about hypothetical games of russian roulette and what I would do in the trolley problem. I am in professional business attire, he is wearing jeans, a graphic shirt, and a manchester united football club snapback.

I answer his riddles, he bids me farewell with a smile and a well-natured clap between my shoulder blades that's hard enough to knock my glasses down to the tip of my nose once i turn around. All I get is a "you're impressive, kid," on my way out. I am confused as all fuck as I step back outside and hail a taxi, and spend the entire drive home in silence wondering what in the fresh hell that was.

I get the job.

I wonder if I met life's main character.

Gerard Way's Kingdom of the Mad (unpublished Vertigo's Batman pitch)

After winning the 2008 Eisner Awards for Best Limited Series with The Umbrella Academy: Apocalypse Suite, Gerard Way pitched his alternative Batman story called Batman: Kingdom of the Mad to DC Comics. They approved of Way's story and agreed to publish the series under their Vertigo imprint. However, Way's busy schedule kept him from writing the miniseries and the project was ultimately forgotten.

In June 2013, Way posted his sketch [re]designs for the project on Twitter. He revealed the series would have been six issues in all with one word titles, the first issue would've been titled "Rats".

- In his version, Batman only eats rats. His powers only he knew about like ESP. He can see into the future. And turning into a bat.
- His cape has a massive drawing of an imaginary magical kingdom inside of it, which served as his version of Heaven.
- Robin (Dick Grayson) was "the only person in the book that isn't nuts."
- The Joker was the youngest character in the book at age 19, a year or two younger than Robin.
- Penguin being the honorable judge.
- Mr. Freeze's design was a robot-like figure whose suit and dressed as his dead wife in armor made of scrap-metal from her car accident.
- The Riddler was worked with taxidermy and keeps the mask on a mannequin head on his desk. He has clues written all over his office. His mask would be more of a bag covers his full head.
- Two-Face was (might be) one of guards of the asylum.
- The Anti-Bats group.
- His fan asked about if Harley Quinn would show up in his series, Way stated that there were no plans for Harley, but Catwoman would appear and was actually "very strange".

You know what, I feel like re-iterating my thoughts from my very tired tags from last night this lovely morning because I see a lot of people in the notes being like "but I didn't consent to seeing leather/kinky/etc stuff at Pride!!!" Well, I hate to break it to you but actually… you did.

First of all, if you look at old photos, leather/kink people have always been at Pride. So it stands to reason that they're still there. And if you knew the actual history of Pride beyond clean, family-friendly rainbow-capitalist gay assimilation you'd know that. But this isn't even the most important point. The most important point is that a lot of Prides (all I've ever been to) post a marching order or list of groups, who are marching and/or have a stall at said Pride PUBLICLY ON THEIR WEBSITE. And, frankly, if you don't look at this publicly available information or look at it, ignore it, go there and then go surprised Pikachu meme - that's kinda...on you. Same if you take kids with you and then complain that you didn't want them to see certain groups. The event publicly announced that those groups would be there and if you didn't want your kids to see them but went there anyway, that's a you-problem.

And of course some people will now go "but I should be able to go to Pride I'm [their identity]!" Correct, there should be a space for you and your needs. And honestly, I also think that there should be more LGBTQIA+ spaces that aren't focused on sex and alcohol. But still, not every space is for everyone. Now, my state capital's Pride had quite a lot of kink groups marching in the parade. My home town's Pride, however, had zero. Long story short, that difference stems from how the LGBTQIA+ communities in those two cities have grown. But my point is: You can and will find Pride events that are safe for you to go to. And even the Pride event in my state's capital DID have family-friendly events. They did not just have the parade with some kink groups marching in it. At the same time those groups where marching you could check info stalls, watch political speeches, concerts, comedians etc. Plus, they had a program with various events for ONE ENTIRE WEEK. Movies, smaller marches, readings of queer literature etc. You can and will find pride events there that don't focus on kink and that ARE family-friendly. You just have to moderate your own experience. (And if the Pride has a marching order you can just go and grab a coffee or sandwich while the groups you don't want to see are marching past and come back later, you know). What you can't do, however, is go to an event that publicly states that there are gonna be kink groups there and then act surprised and outraged that there are kink groups there.

prismatic-bell

All of this is excellent, but OP, if I may add one minor thing as well?

Quite a lot of the leather daddies I've seen in my life have also been bears, or have been old enough to be MY dad. (And I'm in my thirties.)

If you have no problem with a bunch of skinny white/ambiguously brown twinks swanning around Pride dressed in nothing but their flag of choice (which is their right, more power to them), but you have an objection to leather daddies...

.....then I strongly suspect you are also guilty of "uwu cute yaoi boys" fetishization. The objection starts where the ability to commodify stops.

Gay men are allowed to live their lives in ways that did not step out of a coffee shop AU fanfiction, and you need to respect that.

canadianwheatpirates

I mean, it's also fatphobia. I agree with your overall point about what's acceptable vs objectionable based on whether it can be commodified, it just felt weird to me that you skipped right over how bears are associated with being fat (and having a lot of “““gross””” body hair) to go straight to the fandom angle. Way more people are going to be reacting badly to leather bears (and lbr regular bears too) due to fatphobia than they are because they've internalised a particular concept of gay men from fandom.

Eh, I didn't so much “skip” it as “my brain said that's what I meant and I totally explained it in a way that makes sense to other people, definitely and for sure.” Doesn't it make you glad I'm on drugs to slow me down a bit so you've got at least some chance of understanding me before I nyoom off again?

Because yeah, one of those dudes in the above pictures has just a wee bit of a pudge on him, which I'm sure his dude deeply enjoys. (Listen, I'm just saying as someone who likes girls, the squish is nice to cuddle.) We can't all be uwu bishonen or whatshisface from Glee or Kpop idols, and we shouldn't have to be. Being fat and hairy and old is one way to be queer and it's a totally cool way and should be respected, and that is in fact what I was trying to go for but managed to miss by a significant amount of distance.

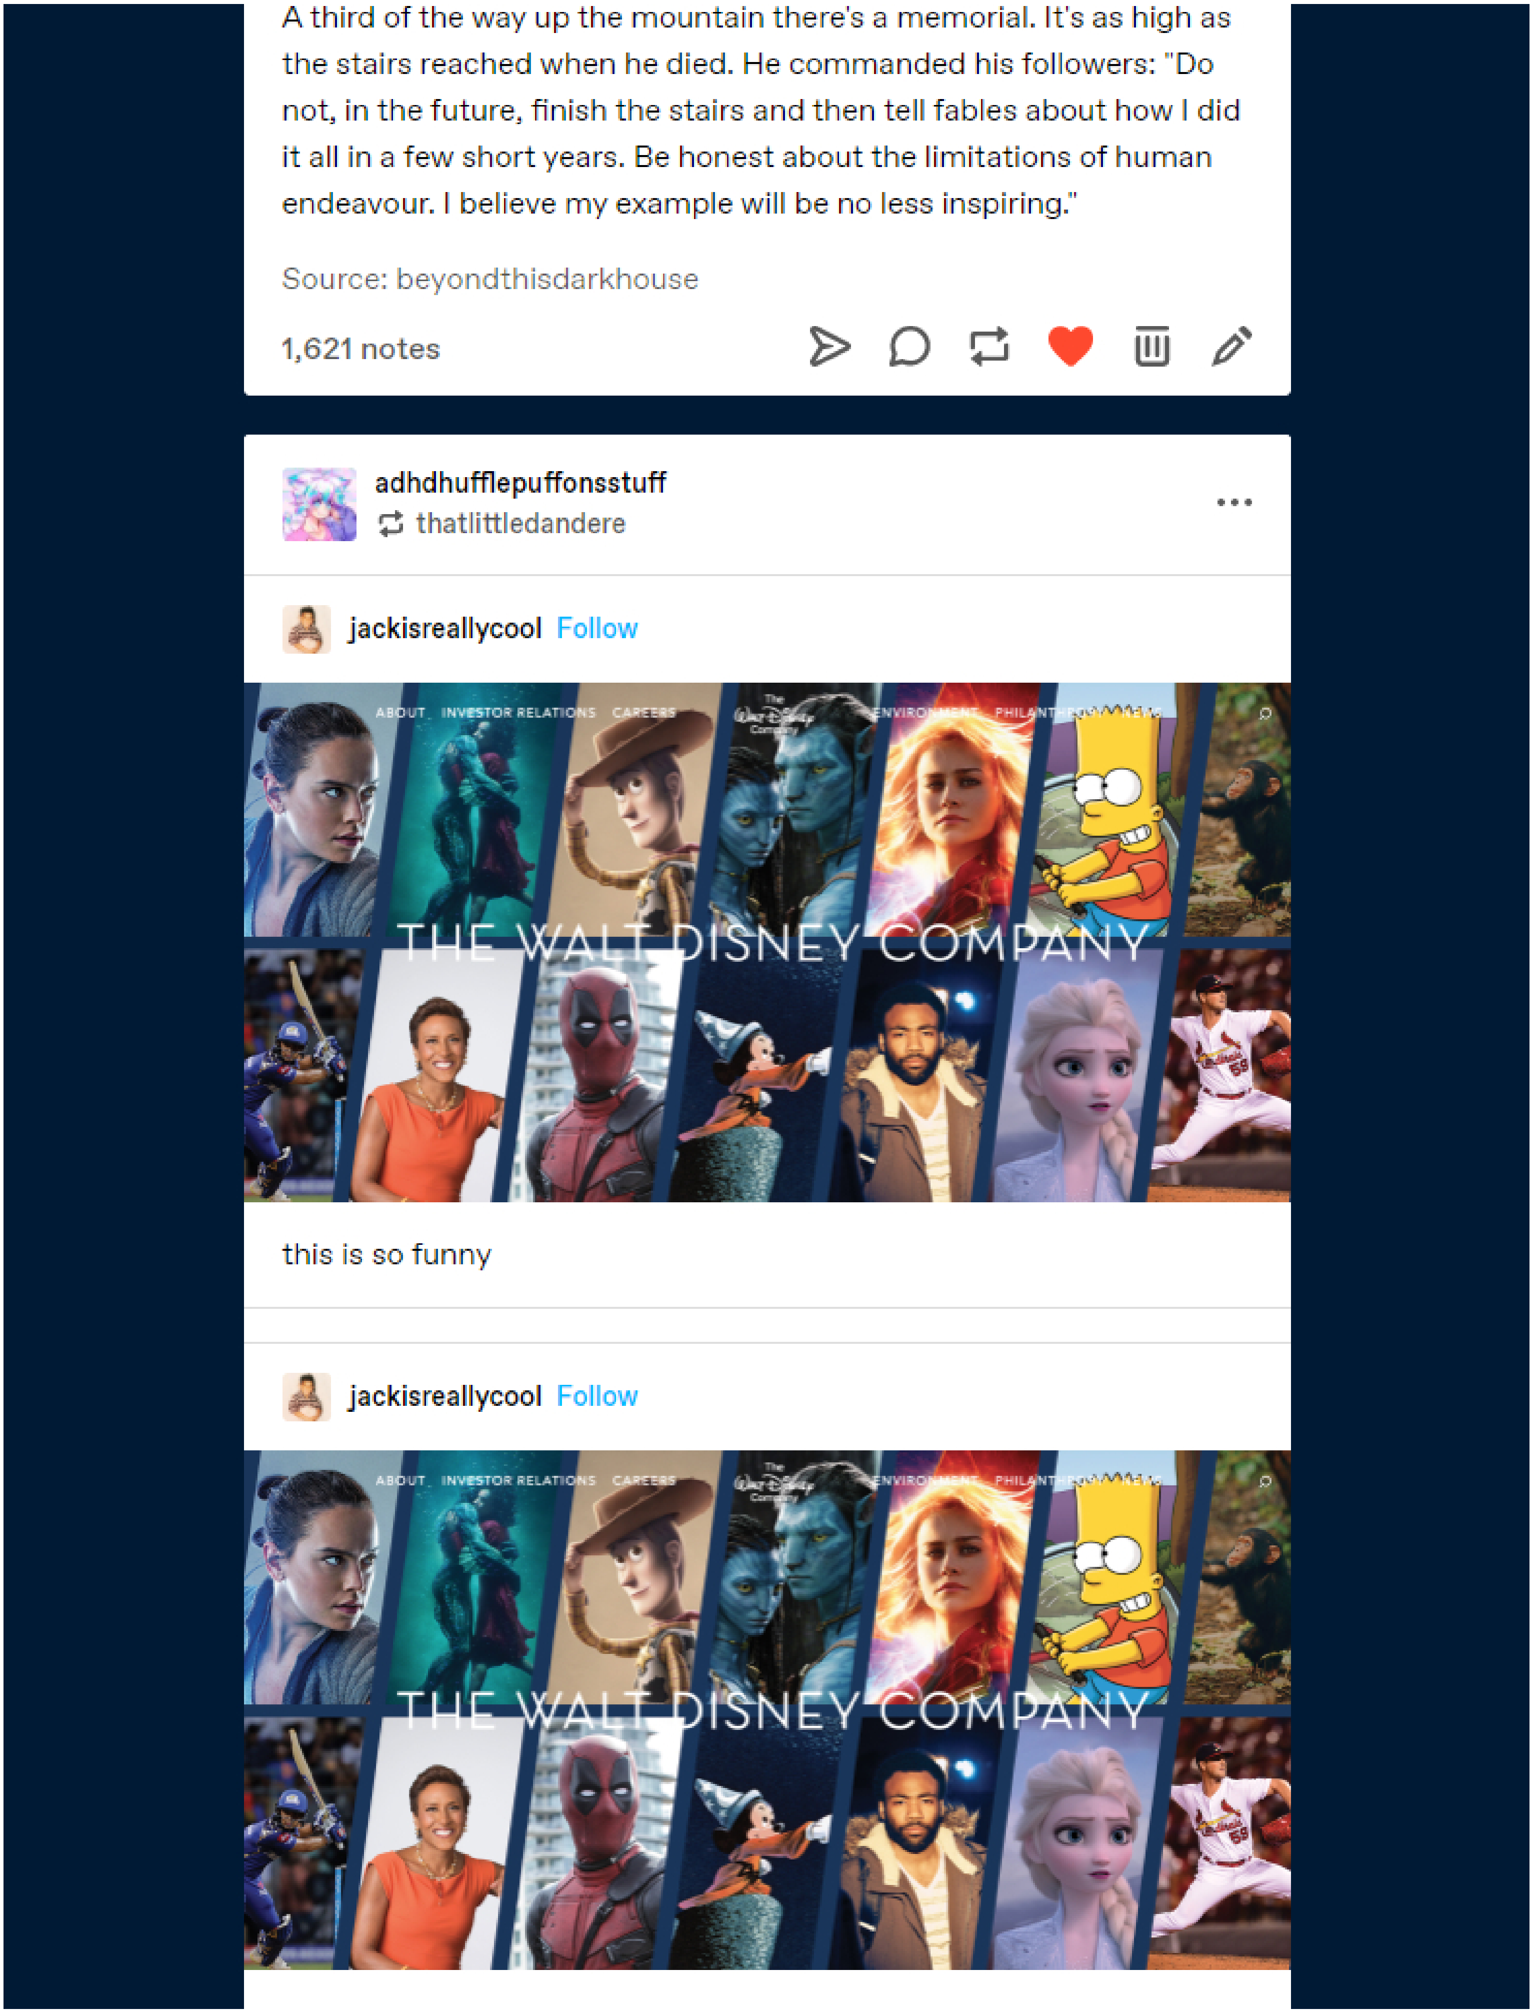
I want two fantasy novels set centuries apart where in the first one we see a trans person who undertook an arduous quest to fight demons and climb to the top of a remote mountain so he could drink from a magical spring that would change his body into his true sex

And in the second one we learn that when he retired from his life as a warrior he founded a monastery at the foot of that mountain and spent his old age hewing the path up to that spring into easily-traversible stairs, and now that monastery's devotees spend their days keeping the area free of demons, and transporting down bottles of springwater to take to monastic hospitals in distant parts of the kingdom

beyondthisdarkhouse Follow



A third of the way up the mountain there's a memorial. It's as high as the stairs reached when he died. He commanded his followers: "Do not, in the future, finish the stairs and then tell fables about how I did it all in a few short years. Be honest about the limitations of human endeavour. I believe my example will be no less inspiring."

I'm still tickled by that "OP is an asshole who probably would get along GREAT with crypto assholes" like my dude half of my friends are hackers and IDK if you know this but being kind of shitty to each other while committing crimes and lying to strangers is just how hackers bond.

I married a dude who threatened to sink the houseboat of a person who was DDoSing his server. My spouse first asked me out after watching me get in a fight with a meth dealer.

There's a reason I call us "bastards."

(the dog is pretty sweet but she IS full of murder)

ms-demeanor

One time some of my friends were bored at a con so they covered one of our buddies in fake blood and carried him through the con thrashing and screaming like they'd beaten the shit out of him just to scare other con-goers. My friends, in this scenario, were the con security. After that we hung out in the goon room and I made them all pancakes. It was a pretty good time.

ms-demeanor

"I'm bored, let's do something illegal" and

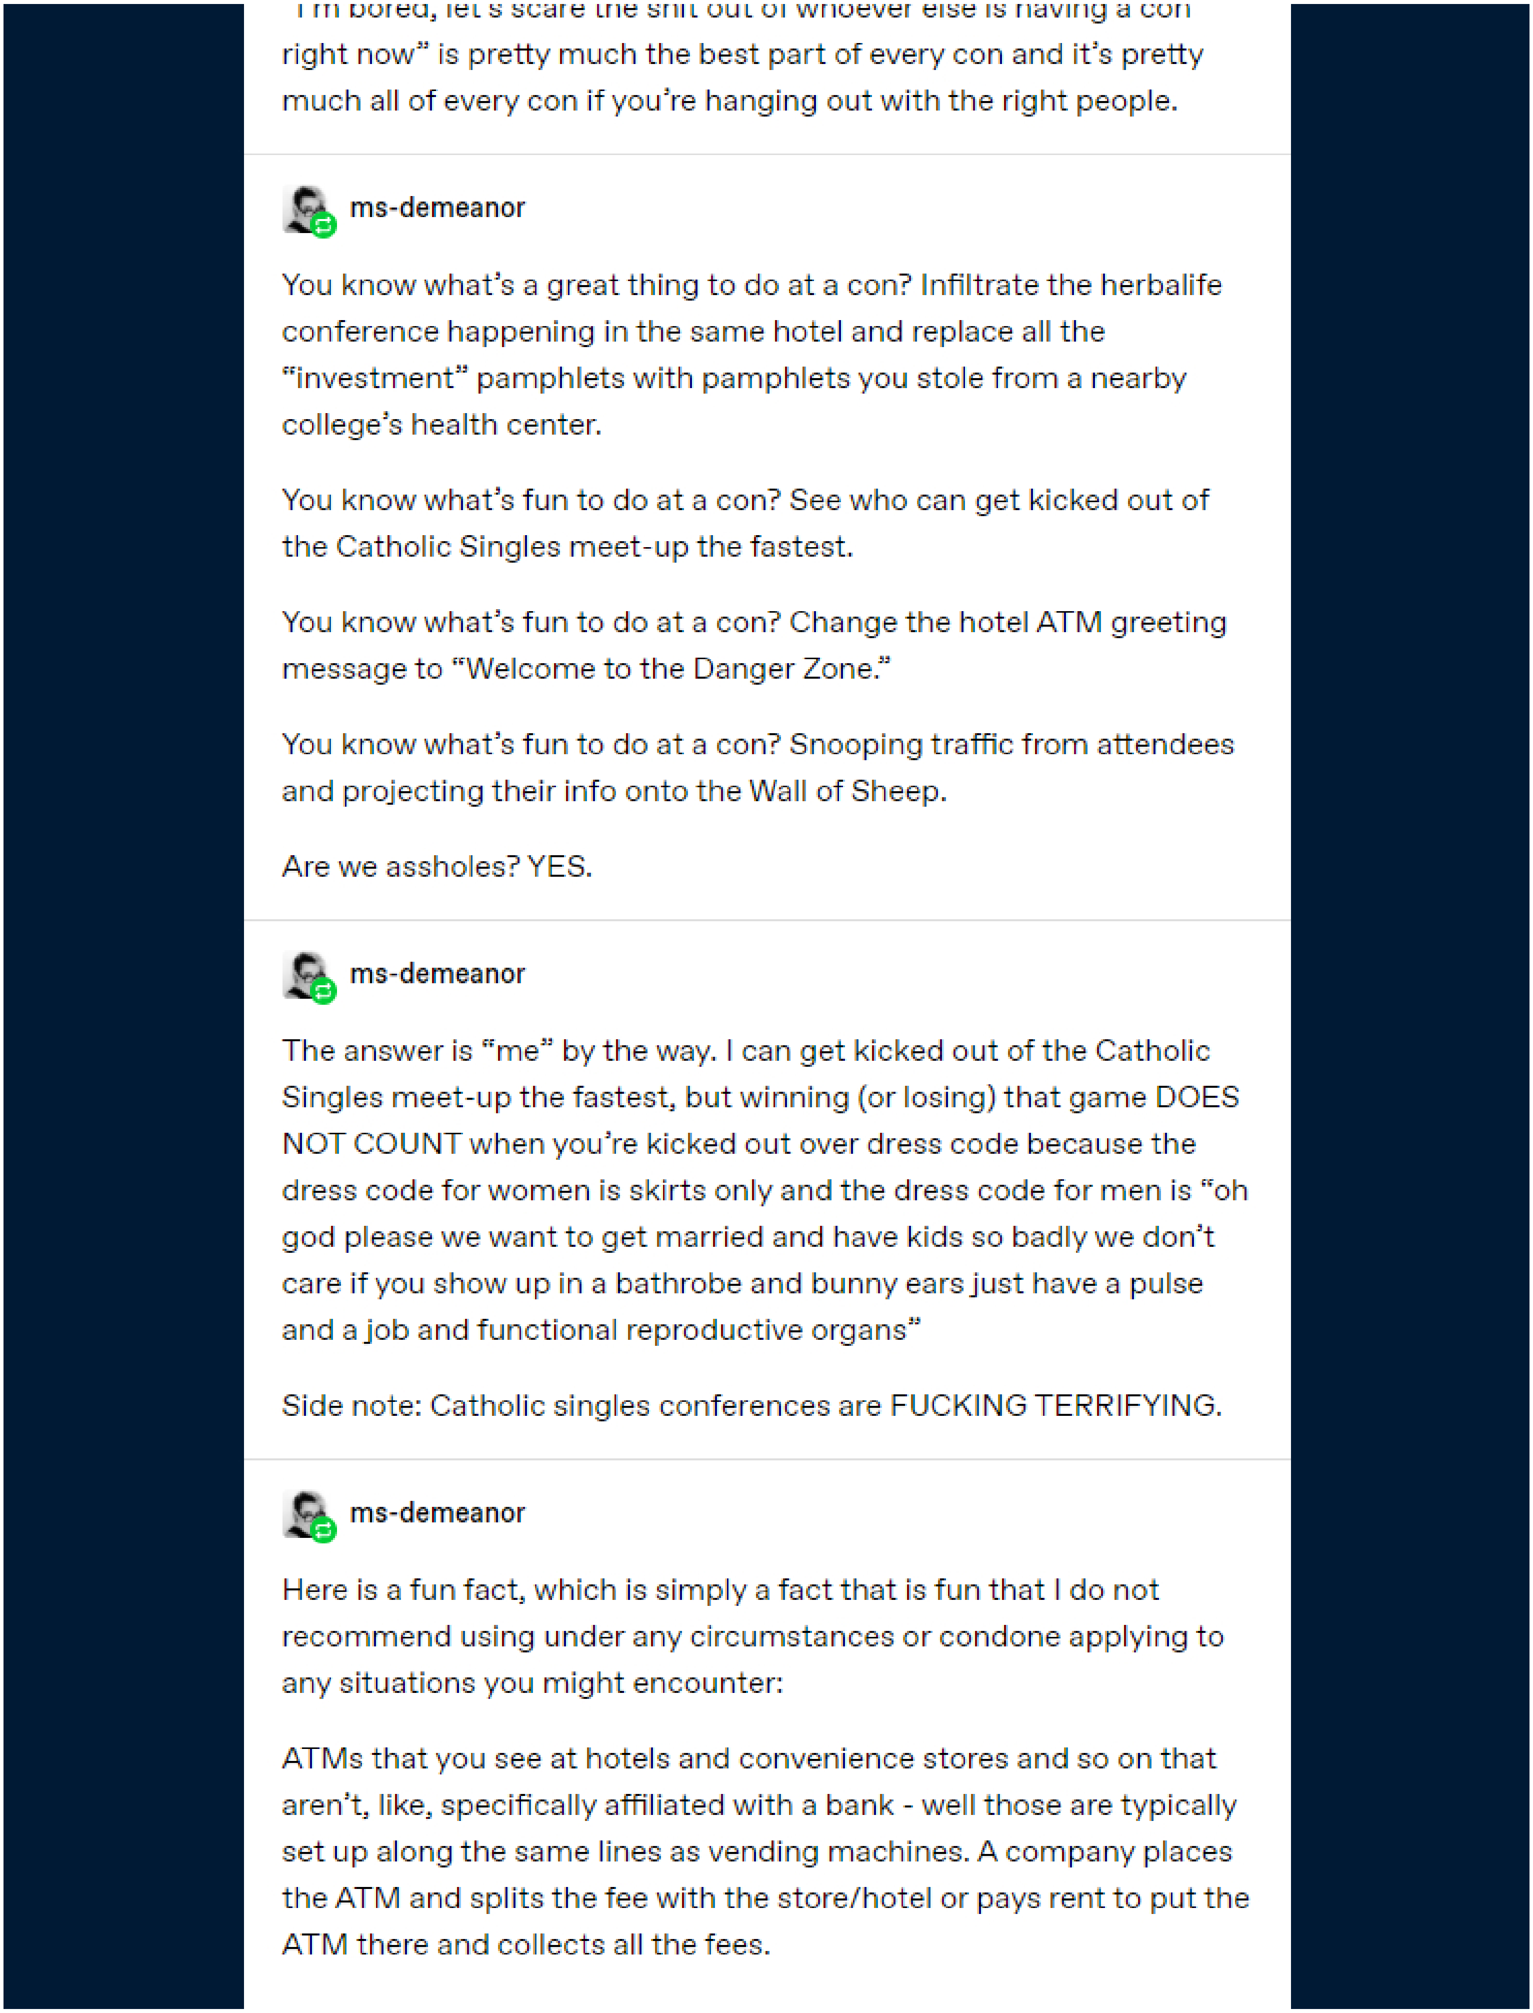
"I'm bored, let's figure out a prank," and

"I'm bored, let's go trespassing," and

"I'm bored, let's go blow something up," and

"I'm bored, let's freak out hotel security," and

"I'm bored, let's scare the shit out of whoever else is having a con



I'm bored, let's scare the shit out of whoever else is having a con right now" is pretty much the best part of every con and it's pretty much all of every con if you're hanging out with the right people.

ms-demeanor

You know what's a great thing to do at a con? Infiltrate the herbalife conference happening in the same hotel and replace all the "investment" pamphlets with pamphlets you stole from a nearby college's health center.

You know what's fun to do at a con? See who can get kicked out of the Catholic Singles meet-up the fastest.

You know what's fun to do at a con? Change the hotel ATM greeting message to "Welcome to the Danger Zone."

You know what's fun to do at a con? Snooping traffic from attendees and projecting their info onto the Wall of Sheep.

Are we assholes? YES.

ms-demeanor

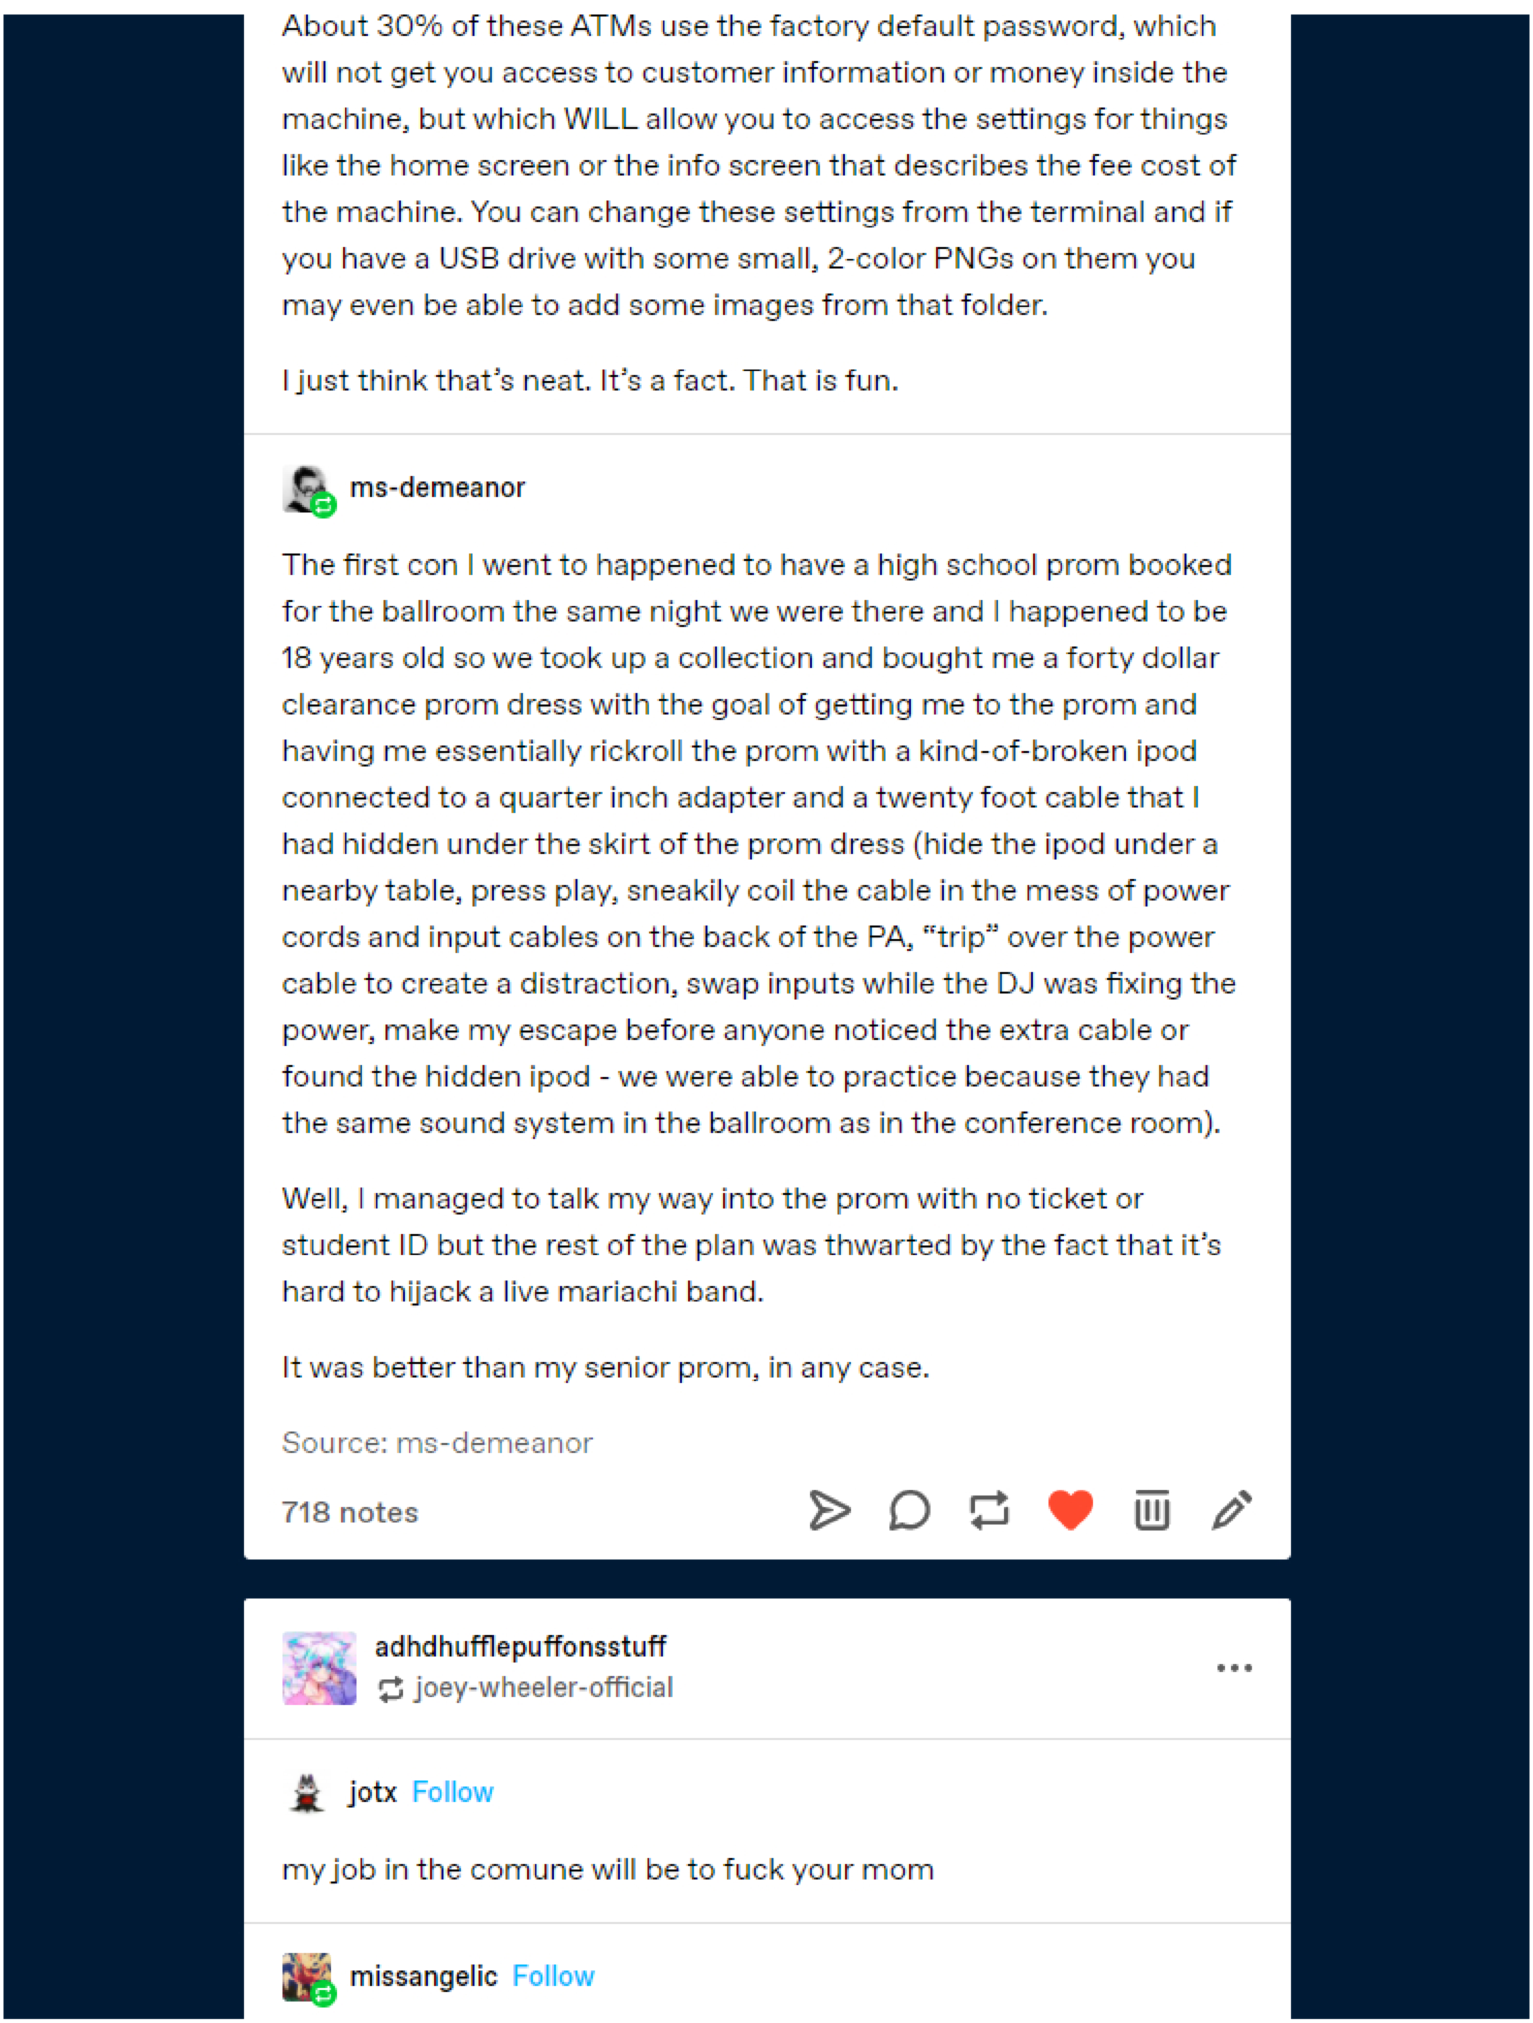
The answer is "me" by the way. I can get kicked out of the Catholic Singles meet-up the fastest, but winning (or losing) that game DOES NOT COUNT when you're kicked out over dress code because the dress code for women is skirts only and the dress code for men is "oh god please we want to get married and have kids so badly we don't care if you show up in a bathrobe and bunny ears just have a pulse and a job and functional reproductive organs"

Side note: Catholic singles conferences are FUCKING TERRIFYING.

ms-demeanor

Here is a fun fact, which is simply a fact that is fun that I do not recommend using under any circumstances or condone applying to any situations you might encounter:

ATMs that you see at hotels and convenience stores and so on that aren't, like, specifically affiliated with a bank - well those are typically set up along the same lines as vending machines. A company places the ATM and splits the fee with the store/hotel or pays rent to put the ATM there and collects all the fees.



About 30% of these ATMs use the factory default password, which will not get you access to customer information or money inside the machine, but which WILL allow you to access the settings for things like the home screen or the info screen that describes the fee cost of the machine. You can change these settings from the terminal and if you have a USB drive with some small, 2-color PNGs on them you may even be able to add some images from that folder.

I just think that's neat. It's a fact. That is fun.

ms-demeanor

The first con I went to happened to have a high school prom booked for the ballroom the same night we were there and I happened to be 18 years old so we took up a collection and bought me a forty dollar clearance prom dress with the goal of getting me to the prom and having me essentially rickroll the prom with a kind-of-broken ipod connected to a quarter inch adapter and a twenty foot cable that I had hidden under the skirt of the prom dress (hide the ipod under a nearby table, press play, sneakily coil the cable in the mess of power cords and input cables on the back of the PA, "trip" over the power cable to create a distraction, swap inputs while the DJ was fixing the power, make my escape before anyone noticed the extra cable or found the hidden ipod - we were able to practice because they had the same sound system in the ballroom as in the conference room).

Well, I managed to talk my way into the prom with no ticket or student ID but the rest of the plan was thwarted by the fact that it's hard to hijack a live mariachi band.

It was better than my senior prom, in any case.

first of all, its a fuckin porn genre. should i tell you that everyone who watches porn does NOT respect women? (if you think that women really want to go into porn industry, i will be disappointed.)

[redacted] · Jun 4
also if you call a woman like this you just sexualize her cause YOU REALLY CALL A WOMAN YOU LIKE LIKE A PORN GENRE AND THINK THATS OKAY? IM SORRY!!!

I know a lot of yall aren't embroiled in twitter discourse because you're smarter than i am, but i gotta add in that the op of that discourse is part of a russian cult of lesbian terfs that like do internet ceremonies and believe that the queer gene started in russia which is why it's surpressed by the government because otherwise every woman in russia would become a lesbian and they would stop producing children for the russian military, it's WILD how insane that group is,

"what makes us human" oh I know this one! use of fire led to the development of cooking led to dietary changes that enabled brain growth. this, plus the light and warmth provided by fire, allowed early hominids to spend time socializing around the hearth, encouraging the development of language and furthering our abilities to communicate, eventually leading to the unprecedented cooperation needed to create and organize human societies.

so it's a combination of food, language, friendliness and cooperation, all thanks to pyromaniacal tendencies and our massively enormous fat heads!

Bruised Fruit (Poem by Myself) (04/23/21)

Fear

is my constant companion.

An urgency

for authority

over every outcome of my existence.

For a circlet

upon my brow

branding me invincible,

and abstracting

from the soft spongy places that refuse to ever heal.

An apple

marred and neglected in the dirt.

My truest core forbidden and spurned.

Resented for factors

outside of my influence-the mistakes of others.

But I am no mistake.

Weaving wit and magic

Like cloth on a loom.

The broken pieces

molded together with gold and starlight.

My luminescence

Shining against the empyrean black.

Fallen.,

Yet I rise.

A masterpiece,

only understood

by the most careful observer.

Cloaked within a masquerade laced with truth.

I guard my heart here.

Bruised fruit.

If you like Danny Phantom let me recommend:

- Generator Rex - The whole world has been infected by nanites, and any life form (plant, animal, human) can suddenly mutate into a nanite creature called an EVO. One kid named Rex has the power to cure EVOs and build robotic parts off himself.

A cutesy, wittle wabbit? Oh, come on, you couldn't handle this yourselves?

GIF by tedosterone

- Blue Exorcist - Rin learns that he's the half-human/half-demon son of Satan, and that his adoptive family are professional demon-fighting Exorcists. Identity-hiding, identity reveals, angst and acceptance!

GIF by underreadedbook

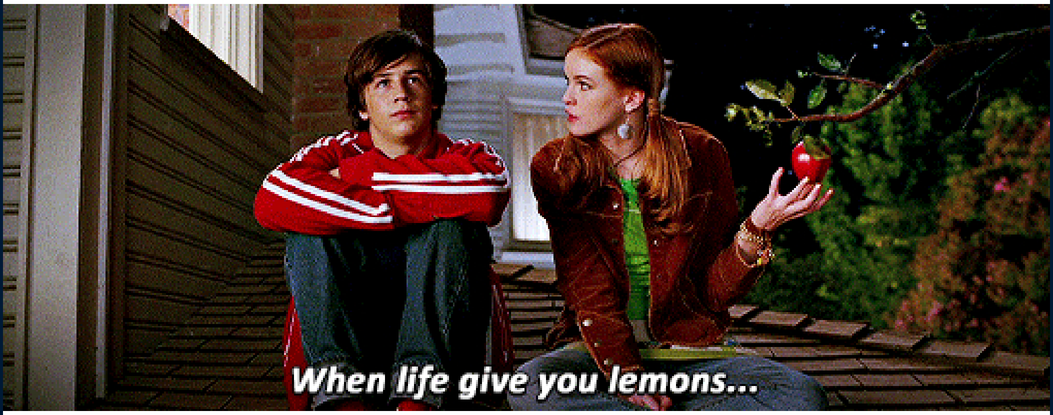
- Sky High (2005) - The son of two of the world's strongest heroes, Will enrolls at a school for supers despite having no powers of his own.



When life give you lemons...

GIF by movie-gifs

- Megamind - Yes it's on another list! Jam-packed with superhero tropes and questions of fitting in with humanity, but the film never takes itself too seriously.

Warming up?! The SUN is warming up?!

GIF by tvandfilm

- The Dragon Prince - A story of two human half-brothers, the elf assassin originally sent to kill them, a dragon's egg, and a world on the edge of war. Also a very grumpy pet toad. And interspecies romance!

GIF by bidragonprince

- Trollhunters - Jim wishes for adventure and finds a magic amulet that chooses him as the next Trollhunter, tasked with protecting the hidden society of trolls safe from dangerous factions of troll-kind.

GIF by wcndcring

- Onyx Equinox - This M-rated series is on here for all you DP angst fic writers! Set in fantastic ancient Mexico, a teenage boy with nothing left to live for is sent on a quest by the gods to close all the gates to the Underworld. Every episode is a Wham Episode!

I'm going to let you give the definitive answer. If someone out there has a crush on Loki, what does that say about them?
Wow! Erm... I don't know.

He's quite a cocktail of characteristics.

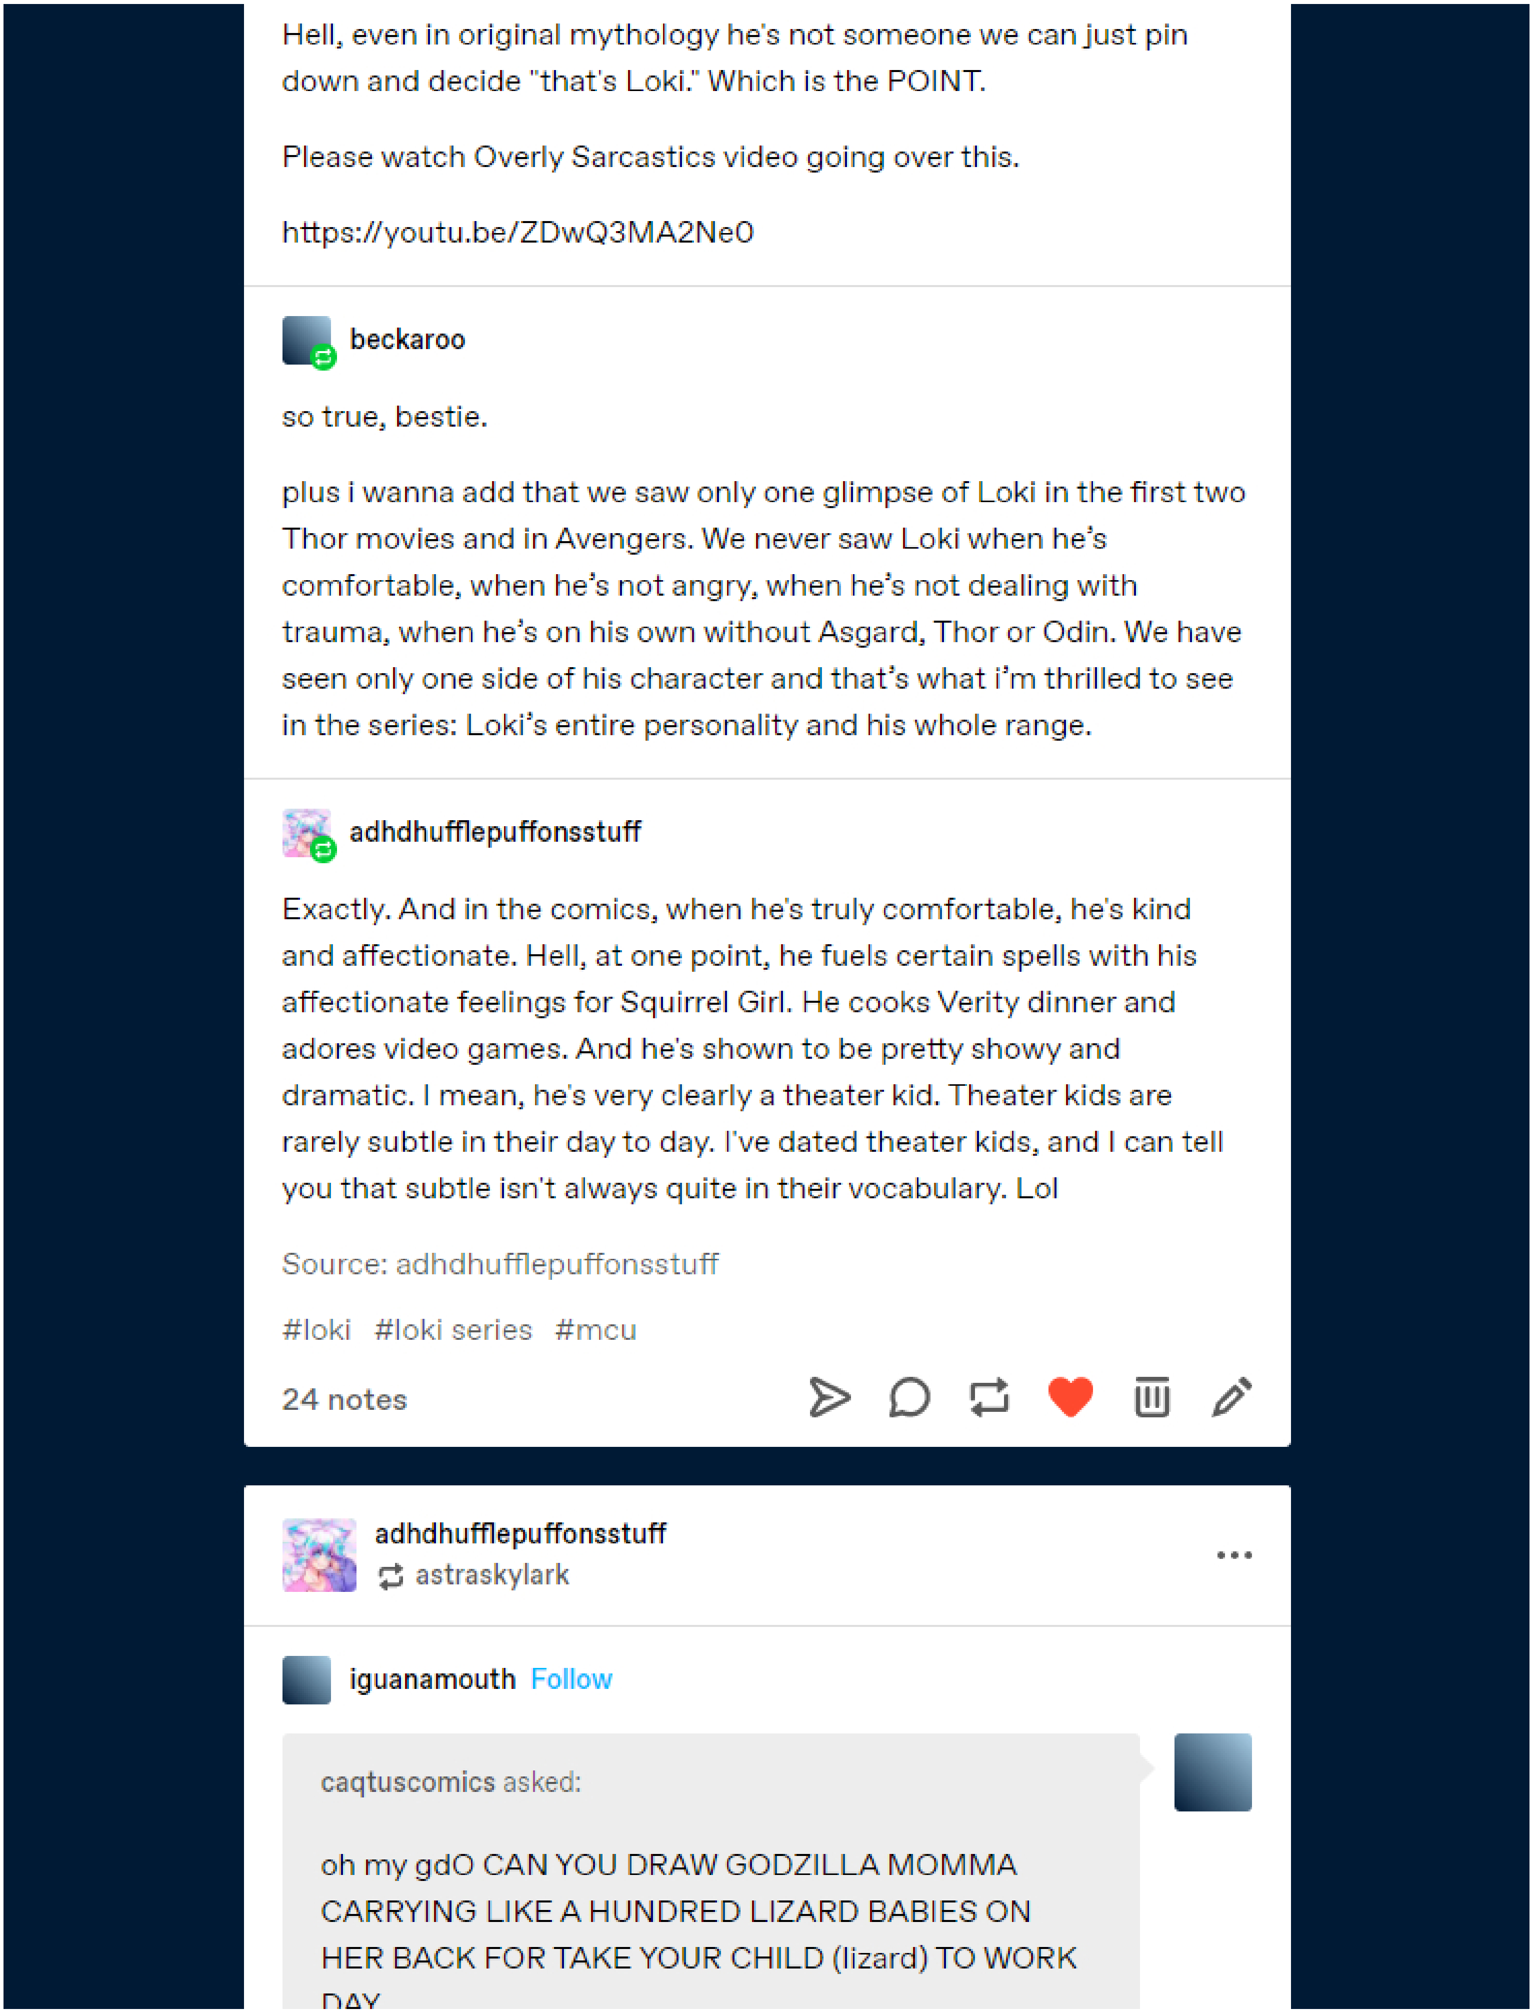
I haven't read all of his comics or anything, but I've seen enough to wonder how much some others have read. I've occasionally seen posts where people are upset that Loki isn't as subtle in the new series trailers as he normally is, because "he's just not that type of person." Or that Tom is overdoing it. And to be honest, there are definitely times in the comics where he actively chooses not to be less subtle. He's still a trickster, he's still always got something up his sleeve, but he is not always subtle either.

Correct me if I am wrong, but I think some people saw the first two Thor films and decided that's all Loki was. Like, he's chaos, constantly changing, never always quite the same. Plus, are we forgetting that this is an alternate Loki at this point? He's not SUPPOSED to be the same as the one before. He's going to grow and develop in ways you're not familiar with, or at the very least, not the same as before.

Also, "subtle" my ass. Sure, he has the capacity to be subtle, and often is depending on mood and situation, but c'mon. His original helmet should have been enough to suggest he carries a certain lack of subtlety. How is that subtle? Explain to me how a horned helmet that's heavy enough to break a human neck just by existing on a person's head equals subtle.

I just really get frustrated when people get mad about his character changes, without realizing how much he changes between comics, when that's literally the point of the fucking show. The point is to go over the many facets of the man, not box his character into a cookie cutter being. And that's what people have been doing with him for years.



Hell, even in original mythology he's not someone we can just pin down and decide "that's Loki." Which is the POINT.

so true, bestie.

plus i wanna add that we saw only one glimpse of Loki in the first two Thor movies and in Avengers. We never saw Loki when he's comfortable, when he's not angry, when he's not dealing with trauma, when he's on his own without Asgard, Thor or Odin. We have seen only one side of his character and that's what i'm thrilled to see in the series: Loki's entire personality and his whole range.

adhdhufflepuffonsstuff

Exactly. And in the comics, when he's truly comfortable, he's kind and affectionate. Hell, at one point, he fuels certain spells with his affectionate feelings for Squirrel Girl. He cooks Verity dinner and adores video games. And he's shown to be pretty showy and dramatic. I mean, he's very clearly a theater kid. Theater kids are rarely subtle in their day to day. I've dated theater kids, and I can tell you that subtle isn't always quite in their vocabulary. Lol

I just can't with the Parent Trap. Like these horrible toxic people hated each other SO MUCH they were willing to never see one of their children FOREVER! And at no point did we get a scene of them like longing for their long lost daughter!

No scene of them secretly looking at baby pictures or something, the closest was them missing their old SPOUSE not their flesh and blood! They were totally like eh I have one twin, I'm sure it's the same! And then they were willing to just split them up again! Like peace I'll see you at Easter!

The nanny was more emotional about meeting the other twin than the parents were! She cried and held the other twin! Like I can't get over how she had the biggest reaction to the whole thing!

And these idiots think they could make it work for round 2 when nothing actually changed for them? Did she leave her fashion company in London, you can just pick up and move a company internationally with a snap of your finger? Did he leave his vineyard in Napa?
